91st YEAR, No. 211 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1975 15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

SPENDING UP 13%

OTTAWA (CP) — Estimates of government spending for the year beginning April 1, including an over-all increase ranging from 11 to 13 per cent, were tabled today by Treasury Board chairman Jean Chretien.

However, the government has changed its bookkeeping system for payments to provinces and the result is that the spending increase is understated.

Based on figures supplied by finance department officials, the range of projected spending increases is 12½ per cent to 14½ per cent.

The estimates tabled today are the first in a series for the coming fiscal year and cover projected spending of $28,242 billion.

UPTURNED BARGE SPILLS TANK CARS

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A barge carrying four railway tank cars, each holding 85 tons of chlorine, and tanks containing 256 tons of liquid caustic, upturned in the Strait of Georgia today.

Scientists said there could be danger to marine life from the chemicals.

The Kingcome Navigation Co. of Vancouver barge, FMC 100, was being towed by Pacific Towing Services" tug Chieftain III from Squamish to Powell River.

The upturned barge was not noticed until 5:45 a.m., when the master of the tug, worried about the slowness of the tug's speed, turned around to find the barge upside down.

It is known that liquid caustic is leaking from the barge but it's still not known how many of the chlorine tanks have been swept to the bottom.

Ministry of transport spokesman Des Allard in Vancouver said it was feared three of the chlorine tanks are on the ocean bed.

Allard said divers were standing by to examine the barge's leaks but were unable to enter the water because of the toxicity caused by the liquid caustic.

A number of vessels were standing by, including the fisheries vessel Brama and the coast guard cutter Rider.

Allard said the barge's upheaval was noticed at Grief Point on the mainland opposite the north tip of Texada and it was not known how long the barge had been that way.

Personnel were endeavouring to carry out an underwater wire sweep of the barge to find out if any of the chlorine containers were still chained below.

"We don't know where these bloody tanks are," he said, "Or whether any of them are leaking."

At a very slow pace, Allard said the barge is being towed to Jervis Inlet, but officials were concerned about weather conditions. Winds were expected to whip up to 30 knots.

Allard said there was no way of knowing how deep the lost chlorine tanks are.

"They could be in 200 or 1,000 feet of water," Allard said, adding, "But we've received a report from Washington, D.C., that 231 feet is the critical point. Below that level it begins to boil."

Rr. C. S. Wong, chief of the department of environment's ocean chemistry division in Victoria said if the leaks of either chlorine or liquid caustic are large they would take their toll of marine life.

Both chemicals could kill plankton he said.

In addition, chlorine is acidic, Wong said, and would attack the tissues of fish.

"Liquid caustic," Wong added, "raises the alkalinity of the water and could be corrosive, too. It would attack pieces of organisms in marine life."

He added, "It's a mixed bag of problems."

Hospital Planner Hired

A new director of hospital planning for the Capital district has been hired by the regional hospital board and will start work about the end of March.

He is John A. Clark, 34, a health planning consultant with the federal department of health and welfare in Ottawa.

Born in England, Clark held a number of hospital administration posts there before coming to Canada in 1969. He was administrator at Cornwall General Hospital in Ontario and at Carleton-Queensway Hospital in Ottawa before holding the federal consulting office.

As regional director of hospital planning, at a salary of $28,000, he will be the chief administrative officer of the Capital district's new Hospital and Health Planning Commission, the agency which has been charged with developing and implementing a regional plan for hospital development.

He will also be the liaison man between the planning commission, hospitals thoughout the district and the provincial government's B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

The hospital planning director's position has been vacant since the first man to hold the post, John Forrester, left last August for an Alberta government job.

Improving The Image

Best dressed man in the House at Tuesday's opening of the fifth session of the 30th B.C. Legislative Assembly was natty Vancouver Sun photographer Steve Bosch, replete with bowler, white tie and gloves. Bosch, whose new-found sartorial splendor earned a chuckle from Premier Dave Barrett, says his rented tux was to improve the image of the press. Today the lensman, normally a casual dresser, let his hair down somewhat.

SALARIES JUMP 16%

VANCOUVER (CP) Wage increases in British Columbia in 1974 averaged 16 per cent or 86 cents an hour, Labor department statistics show.

Skilled employees received average increases of 17 per cent or $1.03 an hour while unskilled workers received 15 per cent or 66 cents an hour.

In 1974, unions had a net gain over the rising cost of living, settlements were 5.4 per cent higher than the previous year while the national rate of inflation was up 3.3 per cent, researchers reported.

In 1973, the average annual increase was 10.6 per cent. It was 9.4 per cent in 1972 and 8.2 per cent in 1971.

Department statistics also show that six of every 10 workers who have joined the province's labor force since 1972 now are union members.

Organized workers now number 395,846 or 43.9 per cent of the total provincial labor force.

Airports, Mail Snarled

Times News Services

A strike by 11,000 federal began to disrupt air traffic across Canada, snarling operations at the country's major airports.

Cross-country postal service also bogged down with a virtual shutdown of the Toronto post office, a key re-handling centre in the postal system. A post office spokesman in Ottawa said closure of the Toronto and Montreal post offices is being considered.

The Toronto post office began laying off 5,000 workers idled by a strike by maintenance men employed by the department and a full shutdown is likely by Thursday.

Michael Lyons, PSAC regional representative in Toronto, said the Toronto post office walkout has been extended to midnight Thursday night from an original cut-off time of midnight Tuesday night.

"This way we stand a better chance of getting it settled as quickly as possible instead of dragging on for weeks with rotating strikes," he said.

Air Canada cancelled all morning flights out of Montreal and short and medium-haul flights out of Toronto International Airport as weather aided striking employees by clogging runways with snow or ic.

Halifax and Saint John, N.B., airports also were closed for at least the morning, but because of thick weather and not the strikes that began Tuesday.

Air Canada reported that its use of all other airports in eastern Canada except Ottawa was discontinued for varying periods of the day either because of weather conditions or because its planes were grounded elsewhere.

NEWS BRIEFS

B.C. Tel Lay-Offs

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — B.C. Telephone Co. will lay off 25 operators because of a 25-per-cent decrease in the number of operator-handled calls. A company spokesman blamed the decreased number of calls on the slumping economy.

Gold Price Soars

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The price of gold shot up almost $5 in Zurich today and the U.S. dollar declined on most international exchanges and equalled its January all-time low in Amsterdam.

Advisers to Kuwait

KUWAIT (UPI) — Kuwait's defence minister said today U.S. military advisers will come to this Persian Gulf state to train Kuwaitis in using the $250 million in sophisticated American weapons bought in 1974.

No Dividends

NEW YORK (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. today omitted paying a dividend to stockholders for the first time since the great depression. "The combination of a very serious economic recession and the sharpest drop in automotive sales since the Second World War has affected our operations adversely," Chrysler chairman Lynn Townsend said in announcing the decision.

Gas 'Threats' Irk Macdonald

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government's willingness to help the United States with its natural gas supply problems will diminish with threats of retaliation from Washington, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

Commenting in the Commons on reports that a U.S. state department official says Canada faces drastic retaliation if it reduces exports of natural gas, the minister said he is willing to assist the U.S. with its problem—but not under duress.

An external affairs spokesman said earlier that the reports concerning possible retaliation were speculative and hynothetical.

The report said the U.S. state department was considering a number of retaliatory steps ranging from the cutting off of Canadian pipelines running through the United States to ending American coal shipments to Ontario steel and electrical generating plants.

In a related development, a federal proposal to cut oil exports to the United States to 650,000 barrels a day will be discussed at a federal-provincial meeting here April 9-10, Macdonald said.

Exports that averaged 900,000 barrels daily last year were cut to 800,000 barrels in January after Ottawa received a report showing a rapid decline in domestic oil reserves.

When he announced the export cuts last November, Macdonald said a further drop to 650,000 barrels would come July 1 if the producing provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan agree.

The National Energy Board has forecast that within two years the country will no longer produce more oil than it consumes.

Macdonald said the additional cut in exports July 1 will come if the provinces agree to reduce production.

UNIFIED COURTS

A province-wide unified family court system is a major recommendation of the fourth report of the royal commission on family and children's law tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

A gradual phasing-in of the unified court system proposed in the report will follow a pilot project of the system begun last year in Surrey and still continuing.

Among the report's other 66 submissions were the recommendations that the age of majority in B.C. should be lowered from 19 to 18, but that 17 be maintained as the age of adult prosecution. (See story page 10.)

Gov't Purchasing Costs Jump 50%

Inflation hit the provincial purchasing, commission last year with a 50 per cent increase in the cost of government purchases.

The annual report of the commission, released Tuesday, shows purchases totalling $127.8 million last year compared to $85 million in 1973. The number of purchase orders, however, increased only 2.8 per cent from 64,811 orders in 1973 to 66,643 in 1974.

"The inflationary trend is predominant," said the report.

"No singular reason or trend for such increases has been demonstrated," said the report. "Instead, it appears raw material and basic manufacturing increases have been passed, at will, along industrial and commercial supply channels with little attempt in the intermediate sectors to halt the escalation."

Market shortages, unwillingness of suppliers to maintain and give firm delivery dates and frustrations of obtaining firm prices, made it a "difficult year" for the commission.

A total of 85 employees now work with the commission which buys for government departments but the report said 17 additional staff members have been requested.

The education department's curriculum resources branch increased its purchases from $5.7 million in 1973 to $8.5 million last year.

The legislative library and archives, the Library Development Commission and Queen's Printer combined spent $5.8 million last year, while other government purchases, channelled through the commission, totalled $113.5 million during the year.

VANCOUVTR (CP) Talks between Greater Vancouver area municipalities and negotiators for 5,000 members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees broke off Tuesday.

The CUPE members in Vancouver, Burnaby, Delta, New Westminster, Richmond and North Vancouver city and district already have voted 85.5 per cent in favor of strike action.

Aubrey Burton, union representative, said municipal negotiators increased their offer to a 15-per-cent wage increase across the board with a cost-of-living adjustment effective July 1 and Oct. 1.

Base rate for CUPE workers in the municipalities is $4.52½ an hour.

LIQUOR PROFITS TOP $108 MILLION

Profits from the sale of liquor in B.C. totalled $108.6 million in the last fiscal year.

The annual report of the Liquor Administration Branch, released Tuesday, reveals total liquor sales during 1973-74 were valued at $336.8 million.

The liquor itself cost $204.6 million and operating expenses were $25.5 million. Other income to the LAB totalled $2 million, mainly from licencing fees.

Total profits of $108.6 million compared to $97.2 million in 1973, and about $84 million in 1972.

Sales were highest in the spirits division, totalling $174.5 million in 1974 compared with $148.9 million the previous year.

A total of $45.4 million in wines was sold, including $27.5 million in B.C. wines, $16.7 million in imported wines and $1.2 million in other Canadian wines.

VOLCANO BLOWS

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (UPI) — New Zealand's largest active volcano, Mount Ngauruhoe, erupted today, throwing 30-foot boulders thousands of feet into the air and showering ashes onto towns up to 20 miles away.

There were no immediate reports of deaths or injuries but residents of towns near the volcano were prepared to evacuate if ashes contaminated their water supplies.

Government scientists said ash clouds from one eruption reached 47,000 feet and could be seen 100 miles away. Mount Ngauruhoe, 7,515 feet high and about 170 miles south of Auckland, usually experiences minor eruptions or tremors about once a year.

Pardons DON'T Erase All Records

OTTAWA (CP) — Senators learned with some surprise Tuesday that pardons granted to erase criminal records do not have much effect.

Officials of the National Parole Board told the Senate legal and constitutional affairs committee that credit agencies and local police forces are not bound to seal convictions despite a pardon.

"Is there any real redress," said Senator Keith Laird (L—Ontario). "I can't see that the pardon does any good at all."

Pardons were established in 1970 under the Criminal Records Act. Persons with a criminal conviction can apply after a period of time varying from two to five years to have their record expunged.

If an investigation shows they have mended their ways, a pardon may be granted by the parole board and their record is sealed.

However, prospective employers and others interested in the person's background can find out about the conviction from credit agencies and local police forces because the act only binds federal agencies, including the RCMP.

Kyle Stevenson, a member of the parole board, said Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has been meeting provincial officials in an attempt to get their co-operation to make pardons more effective.

Provincial legislation making it an offence to divulge a criminal record after pardon could accomplish this, for example.

The committee was continuing hearings on a bill which would transfer control of cannabis drugs — marijuana, hasish and liquid hashish — to the Food and Drug Act from the Narcotic Control Act.

'Hell Of a Tornado'

FORT VALLEY, Ga. (UPI) — A "hell of a tornado" streamrolled a central Georgia town Tuesday, crushing homes and businesses and leaving a trial of death and destruction, and floodwaters chased scores of Alabamans from their homes.

One twister left at least one person dead and more than 100 injured in its rampage through the downtown district of Fort Valley, Ga. Authorities said 14 persons were seriously injured.

Emergency crews searched through a tangle of crumbling buildings, uprooted trees and sparking downed power lines early today for dead and injured.

"We've got numerous houses down and they're still digging in to see if we've got any people there," a Peach County hospital spokesman said.

Police said some 50 homes and downtown businesses were damaged by the twister and some 15 to 20 buildings were "completely gone."

Most of the town was without lights, water or gas early today. Service crews worked round-the-clock to repair damage.

Exhaust Controls Spew Acid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A medical researcher told the U.S. government Tuesday it would be risking a widespread health hazard if it allows exhaust control devices now being placed on cars to spew sulfuric acid into the air.

The environmental protection agency should look "very carefully" at the consequences before permitting any buildup of acid sulfates in the air, as the EPA's own experts now predict would happen with continued use of the catalytic converter in new cars, Dr. Bernard Goldstein of the New York University Medical Center, told a hearing.

The converter, which came into use nationwide with 1975-model cars, is a tailpipe devise which converts health hazardous carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons into relatively harmless substances. But an EPA study indicates that it also gives off sulfuric acid at levels which could cause a health hazard that in a few years would outweigh any benefits it might have.

Goldstein, a doctor of environmental medicine, told an EPA hearing into the subject there is very little question "that sulfuric acid at almost any level is harmful."

"I would be very frightened about releasing sulfuric acid at ground level" where it could be breathed in by people sitting on park benches or walking down the skyscraper-lined canyons of the major cities, he said.

"I think you would have to recognize this as a great potential health hazard," Goldstein added.

He was reluctant under questioning by EPA experts to state any level of sulfuric acid that he thought would be tolerable.

U.S. DEBT TAKES BIG JUMP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. national debt limit is going to be raised four times higher than had been anticipated two months ago. One senator said the $36 billion increase demonstrated the perilous state of the economy.

The government plans a massive borrowing program this year, one which should in itself seriously affect the economy. One possible effect is higher—or a continued high level—interest rate.

On Tuesday, the Senate voted 70 to 20 for the measure which would increase the nation's temporary debt limit to $531 billion, covering spending through June 30. The bill goes to the White House for President Ford's approval.

Sen. Russell Long, (Dem.-La.), chairman of the finance committee, said the need for such a large increase "reflects the seriousness of the recession." Two months ago, he said, the increase had been estimated at $9 billion.

"There are worse things than an increase in our debt," said Long, hoping increased government spending power will help "put our economy in shape."

Sen. Carl Curtis (Rep.-Neb.) said the bill will neither hold down spending nor limit the national debt—$492 billion as of Feb. 13. The current temporary limit is $495 billion with a permanent ceiling of $400 billion.

Airports Snarled, Mails Fouled Up

Air Canada scrubbed out 38 outbound flights from Toronto but said its services with Western Canada and the Caribbean were continuing, though on a delayed basis, with the single runway available.

This runway, being kept open as an emergency measure, was subject to being closed periodically for maintenance.

In Victoria today all was back to normal as picket lines were withdrawn from HMC Dockyard and the Ministry of Transport marine services base.

Ship repair work at Dockyard was halted Tuesday when the 800 members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council honored the picket line set up Monday by PSAC.

Work was also slowed at the marine services base on Harbor Road when employees designated as "essential to national safety and security" and therefore not allwoed to strike, refused to cross the picket line set up by fellow PSAC members.

A PSAC spokesman said the the government had selected too many employees as essential to security.

The 81 Alliance employees at Comox air base remained off the job today for the third day.

As nation-wide effects to the strike mounted, Treasury Board chairman Jean Chretien called Tuesday for renewed efforts to resolve the dispute.

Officials said they were prepared to meet at any time under mediator Tom O'Connor, but union leaders said they were not prepared to resume bargaining until more money is put on the table.

They are seeking a 42.5 per cent pay increase in a one-year contract.

The chairman of the Public Service Staff Relations Board, Jacob Finkelman, today called both parties in the dispute to meet again with O'Connor this afternoon.

It was to be the first session scheduled since talks broke off Monday.

In a related development a Manitoba MP told the Commons that the transport department should launch an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the landing of an Air Canada flight at Winnipeg International Airport Monday when it was closed by snow conditions.

The strike of federal blue collar workers led to the Winnipeg airport being closed for over two hours because some workers walked out and those staying on the job were unable to clear runways adequately.

A labor shortage in the public service within the next decade unless the wages of the federal blue collar employees are made comparable to those in other sectors has been predicted in a confidential report prepared by the federal pay research bureau.

Now it costs 6.2¢ to ship a pound of meat from Edmonton to Halifax.

We know about the cost of eggs and meat and sugar. A cup of coffee. Or a glass of beer.

We know because we have to spend more for practically everything CN buys these days.

And we're not just talking about paper clips. The same freight car we bought in 1971 for $17,000 now costs $24,000. (Over the next four years we'll need thousands more of these cars to meet demand.)

Locomotives that were $340,000 apiece are up to $485,000 now. (And we're going to need a lot more of them, too.)

The cost of materials has gone up 81%, diesel fuel 110%, and wages 70% since the start of 1972.

Yet, the recent increase in our "general" rates — which despite their name apply to less than a quarter of our total freight business — was minor by comparison. Obviously we're not going to get rich. With costs continuing to rise, there will have to be further increases to keep pace.

It is in Canada's best interest to have an efficiently-run and adequately compensated rail transportation system with rates based on normal competitive business practices.

But even with moderately higher freight rates, the railroads are still one of Canada's best bargains. Freight rates represent a very small part of the purchase price of a product. Here are a few examples of current rates:

1 lb. sugar — Saint John to Winnipeg — 2.4¢
1 tin canned goods — Chatham, Ont. to Regina — 2.2¢
1 lb. pkg. cereal — Peterborough to Edmonton — 3.7¢
1 lb. butter — Melville, Sask. to Vancouver — 3.5¢
1 lb. fruit — Kamloops to Winnipeg — 3.6¢

There is an unprecedented demand for CN's freight services — a growth of more than 40% over the next five years is projected. To maintain our existing plant and provide for this future growth, we're going to need additional revenues. These will buy modern equipment, improve the capacity of our main track and yards, and help our customers in many other ways.

We can show them, for instance, how to reduce inventories — so expensive at today's interest rates. Consolidate and systematize deliveries. Control total distribution costs.

Those are the kind of economies that are going to make real sense — and dollars — in the long run. For you, and for every Canadian.

Oil Even for Israel, Says Shah

Times News Services

PARIS — The Shah of Iran Tuesday re-affirmed that he would sell oil to all purchasers, including Israel, and would not participate in any embargoes.

The comments by Shah Reza Pahlevi were significant because he made them following a lengthy discussion with U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in Zurich, in which Kissinger sought these assurances in the event Israel gives up the captured Egyptian oil wells at Abu Rudeis.

Kissinger then flew to Paris, the last stop on his current 10-day trip to Europe and the Middle East.

With assured supply, Israel would be in a better position to give up the oil fields. At that point the problem would become a financial one, with an estimated $200 million to $400million needed to make up the balance of payments gap. American officials said Kissinger has already discussed the problem with Israeli leaders.

Kissinger returned to Switzerland for talks with the Shah Tuesday in an effort to put together the pieces of a Middle East settlement and to discuss broader energy policies. The Shah's specific remark on oil supplies could provide Kissinger with another pressure point on the Israelis if the negotiations prove difficult.

"We have never boycotted anybody," said the Shah, whose petroleum flowed to Israel even during the October 1973 war. "Once the tankers are loaded it is of no importance; we don't know where it goes." Iran is a Moslem, but not an Arab, state.

Iranian oil revenues quadrupled to close to $20 billion in 1974, according to the National Iranian Oil Company's annual report.

In 1974, Iran produced about 350 million cubic metres of crude — 2.7 per cent more than in 1973 — and exported about 312 million cubic metres, of which only 24.3 million cubic metres were direct exports by the Iranian Oil Co.

The remaining crude oil was exported through the former oil consortium of Western firms, now called Iran Oil Services Co.

Meanwhile, Tapline, the United States-owned pipeline that brings Saudi Arabian oil to the Mediterranean, is the latest casualty of the international oil surplus.

The Trans-Arabian Pipeline Co. announced today it stopped pumping Saudi crude oil to its terminal at Zahrani, 35 miles south of Beirut, on Feb. 9 because it has no contracts to ship from there for the next six months.

Tanker shipping from the Persian Gulf is $2 a barrel lower than Mediterranean shipping costs, a company spokesman said, and there is not even enough demand to keep all the tanker fleet operating.

The 30-inch pipeline normally carries an average of 450,000 barrels a day, the spokesman said, but by early February only 50,000 barrels a day was being pumped.

Provinces Say No

OTTAWA — Provincial welfare ministers ended their two-day meeting with federal Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde today without a commitment to support federal proposals for major reforms of the welfare system.

Ministers from most of the provinces say they want extensive new studies or changes in a Lalonde proposal to combine a modified guaranteed minimum income with income supplements for the working poor.

The proposal, presented to the provinces by Lalonde at the opening of the conference Tuesday, would provide an unspecified guaranteed minimum income to single parents and the unemployable together with a sliding scale of income supplements to aid the working poor.

Criticism came from three fronts as provincial welfare ministers spoke to reporters outside the closed conference.

Ontario, Quebec and Alberta called for further detailed study before any commitment is given to the costly proposition of supplementing the incomes of the working poor.

The New Democratic Party welfare ministers of British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba objected that the proposal would split recipients into separate employable and unemployable categories.

Nova Scotia and Newfoundland ministers said the cost could overburden their strained provincial economies which can only support more modest measures to supplement the incomes of those who are unable to work.

Lalonde told reporters the ultimate cost would range between $250 million and $2 billion a year, depending upon the level of support agreed to in an incomes program.

Despite the objections, he said he still hoped for early agreement in principle to go ahead with the two-phase program.

He said the two-to-three-year delay in implementing an income supplement program would give the provinces the time they need to study details and set income subsidy levels.

Lalonde told the provinces the objective should be "to provide income from employment and then, failing that, to provide an assured or guaranteed income sufficient to maintain the family."

He appealed to the ministers to resist pressures to cut back on welfare spending because of high inflation and other financial troubles. Ottawa would pay at least 50 per cent of the cost of any program eventually established, he said.

The guaranteed income would give unemployables a base income while allowing them to earn some money and still receive benefits, he added.

Gas Hike Justified —McCall

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia was justified in boosting the price of natural gas to United States customers and will be justified in turning off the tap altogether one day, former Oregon governor Tom McCall said today.

McCall, whose term expired last month, said putting the squeeze on United States customers might spark the development of alternative energy sources.

Sources, such as windmills, tides, ocean waves, geothermal power and power from the sun, must be developed if the world is to put an end to the high cost of energy today, which he said was a prime contributor to inflation.

"I find little that's obnoxious in B.C.'s attitude," he added.

"The price increase which would well be regarded by Americans as gouging, was justified; the forthcoming closing of the valve is to protect B.C.'s economy and we need the warnining against waste.

"I even wish B.C. and other nations that send us fuel would go farther and demand that in return for their shipments to us that we be required to speed up development of alternative energy sources."

Chile Junta Jeered

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexican President Luis Echeverria has accused the U.S. of "Intolerable" intervention in the 1973 overthrow of the Marixist regime in Chile.

Addressing a fervent crowd at the opening session of an "international commission to investigate the crimes of the Chilean junta," Echeverria shouted:

"Intervention has been proven, recognized and even seriously criticized by very high ranking personalities and institutions of a country that adopted, against Chile, forms of meddling, which are intolerable."

An estimated 3,000 sympathizers from 35 countries packed the marble-walled fine arts palace in downtown Mexico City Tuesday to hear Echeverria's emotional keynote address.

The crowd hissed and booed at two large effigies of the Chilean military leaders who deposed the late president Salvador Allende, one of Echeverria's closest friends, in September, 1973.

HEAVY ASMARA FIGHTING

ADDIS ABABA (CP) — Eritrean guerrillas continued to battle government troops today outside Asmara after the heaviest fighting inside the besieged provincial capital in eight days.

Residents said there were several explosions in the city more than an hour after sunrise and steady firing was reported through the morning on the twisting, mountain road to Massawa, Ethiopia's seaport on the Red Sea.

The rebels also were concentrating rocket and machine-gun fire on the airport, to which the government is ferrying reinforcements, residents said.

Skeptical Britons Greet Reformed Watergate Man

LONDON (WP) — Jeb Magruder was in town to promote his book, and puzzled Britons did not know what to make of him.

Was the former deputy director of the Committee for the Re-election of the President a reclaimed sinner or was his "new-found morality," as one skeptic put it, a stunt to make money?

At a press conference staged by his British publisher and oiled with sherry, Magruder assured questioners that his conversion was "genuine."

It is not, he said, "a change I came to because I thought it was good public relations."

Anyway, he is not making that much money, is still jobless and "barely surviving."

He did look forward, however, to picking up $1,500 a time on the lecture circuit.

Did he not "choke on a lot of that perjury?" he was asked.

He certainly did, said Magruder, looking neat and trim in a gray business suit, striped blue shirt and dark green polka-dot tie.

It was the very idea of having to lie again that made him come clean, a course he would recommend to his former boss, Richard Nixon.

"It's really quite cleansing when you can confess," he said.

"Holding it within you causes internal problems. At least I processed my guilt out."

Magruder held forth for 45 minutes in Stationers Hall, once headquarters for the printing guild and the session revealed more about British attitudes toward the United tates than it did about Watergate.

Curious Quiet Throne Speech

As a throne speech, the document which Lt.-Gov. Walter Owen read in the British Columbia legislature Tuesday afternoon was not much of a forecast of what's to come in the way of legislation at the spring session. Rather, the substance and tone indicated strongly that Premier Dave Barrett has decided to call a halt in the New Democratic Party's route march to socialism in B.C. — at least until after the next election.

Compared to previous throne speeches of the NDP government, which were only the barest skimpy outlines of its intentions, this one was a veritable encyclopedia. But mostly it covered past deeds, things the government did during 1974, not what it intends to do in 1975.

It's a long speech—Barrett and his public relations advisers finally seemed to have grabbed the wonderful image-building opportunity presented by the regular live, province-wide CBC television and radio coverage of the opening of the new session. In the past, if a viewer got up to get a snack, he missed the whole speech.

Does this latest speech indicate an election is in the offing? The premier repeated at a press conference that the odds are still 10 to one against it this year, but added a new proviso. If some "extraordinary event" came along—and such happenings are easy enough to whip up nowadays—then there might be an election.

In one sense, however, it is an election speech, although probably the election is at least a year away. The speech shows carefully what the NDP is going to do to prepare methodically for that election—stand on its considerable record and do nothing until then that might whip up unseemly controversy, as with ICBC, the Land Commission Act and Mineral Royalties Act in past sessions.

Unless the premier's keeping some horrible bill absolutely secret—and indications are there will be no surprises—this session will be uncontroversial as it relates to legislation.

The biggest pieces of legislation mentioned in the throne speech would seem to be those promising a new financial institution "responsive to the needs of B.C." with emphasis on easy mortgages and a new Elections Act which will probably both limit the size of donations to political parties and force disclosure of donors' names.

Who could possibly oppose either? Both are long overdue. It's been federal NDP policy for years to provide six per cent mortgages.

And as for electoral reform, even the "submissive" Liberal administration in Ottawa that Barrett rails against and big blue Tory Ontario have moved to enact campaign fund disclosure laws and limits on spending. It's significant the premier mentioned nothing about re-distribution in B.C., which is another needed electoral reform. He talked about doing something last year, appointing a commission to study the need for re-worked riding boundaries and whole new constituencies, but so far has done nothing.

This throne speech, while pledging a number of significant new statutes—Expropriation Act, Credit Unions Act, Outdoor Recreation Act, Wild Rivers and Wilderness Act, Legal Services Commission Act, Government Liquor Act—and amendments to existing laws, would indicate the government intends to adopt a low profile.

While it said "notwithstanding the slowdown in economic activity in Canada, the B.C. economy has performed well, particularly in relationship to other Canadian provinces," in the very next paragraph the government points up the seriousness of the situation with disclosure of its forestry public employment plan.

Saying the B.C. economy has performed well compared with other provinces recalls the barefoot man who complained about going shoeless until he met someone who had no feet. Sure, if B.C. is compared with Newfoundland or Nova Scotia, our province's economy is just humming along. But what kind of yardstick is that?

As always, the real indications of a government's intentions come with the budget, but judging from this quiet, almost conservative throne speech, and the orders of various cabinet ministers in recent weeks to slow the rate of spending, the budget Premier Barrett will bring down on Friday next week is going to be a spare, hold-the-line fiscal document. Gone for the time being at least, thankfully, is the free-spending administration whose rapid forced pace of change took people's breath away.

"... as long as he hangs on we don't have to worry about feeding him ..."

RICHARD GWYN

Columnist's Maudlin Admission

OTTAWA — The job of a columnist and of a witch-doctor have this in common: both have to feign insight into problems we really aren't at all certain how to deal with. Instant opinions, instant expertise about Big Issues of the day from defence to housing, from the mess in transportation to the pottage in the tar sands, all dressed up in bold prose to avoid the fatal wishy-washyness of on-the-one-hand-this, on-the-other-hand that.

It's been a long time since any subject caused me more difficulty than the green paper on immigration. I've written about it once, but without any conviction I had said what I wanted to say. I've thought hard about it since and still find myself staring, Hamlet-like, at its pages. A maudlin confession this, except that I suspect many other people are as undecided and as unhappy about their reactions.

Part of the issue is easy to discuss. This is the question of how large Canada's population should be, and therefore how many immigrants we should bring in. I favour the slow growth option. We cannot forever over-crowd our cities, chew up our best farmland and consume our resources. Also, we do poor countries no favors by draining off their brains.

The difficult issue is the color question. It is complex, emotional and it exposes nerves we'd hoped were hidden. The problem is stark, but it must be faced: to discriminate is immoral and indefensible, yet if too many non-white immigrants come in too quickly the certain result will be serious social unrest. We are caught in an ethical and political Catch 22.

The green paper has been attacked as an elaborate plot to legitimize a new policy of color discrimination. Such suspicions not merely are wrong but they are damaging because they make sensible debate almost impossible.

Until about 20 years ago, there was little or nothing to be proud of in our racial record. We finally got away from Polish jokes and French Canadian jokes by inventing Newfie jokes. Anti-semitism once was rampant. We treated our Indians and Metis like third-class citizens. The immigration rules between 1931 and 1946 prohibited entry to all but white Americans and commonwealth citizens. All others, Frenchmen included, had to come in as "farmers" which is how citizens as distinguished as George Ignatieff, former United Nations ambassador, slipped into this country.

Today, and it is something to be proud of, our immigration policy is almost certainly the least-discriminatory in the world. The green paper pledges that future policy will not discriminate on the basis of "color, creed or religion." Immigration Minister Robert Andras, whom I've talked to at some length, has not a trace of prejudice.

At old immigration building on Oswego, new immigrants were examined.

Yet the problem remains. Non-white immigration has increased sharply. Like any society, Canada can cope with only so much social and cultural change. At the same time our native peoples are demanding to be full citizens. Our first debt due, and it must be paid, is to our own Indians and Inuit. To attempt too much at one time is to make certain that nothing is done.

But to discriminate would make us a small and mean people. The cost of discrimination is not economic nor political (the notion we can reduce world overpopulation is straight fantasy) but moral.

Only to avoid discrimination is a timid virtue. We are, officially and in fact, a multi-cultural nation. Immigrants, white, black, brown and yellow, have brought diversity and colour to a nation that was until two decades or so ago a stultifying WASP backwater that surrounded a Quebec ghetto. If we have anything to offer other countries, except some foreign aid for the sake of conscience and some spare grain and pulpwood and minerals, it is a working example, full of flaws but still working, of racial tolerance.

None of this draws the two sides of the argument to the point of a decision. A partial solution lies hidden in the green paper. Buried beneath circumlocutions and qualifications, it makes a case for a slow-down in the immigration flow. A reduction, non-discriminatory and general, in the numbers of newcomers of all types would ease the social pressures that they, unintentionally, create.

As a second step we could eliminate the nominated class of immigrants, that is close relatives from nieces to uncles to grandchildren of those who have already arrived. Because a disproportionate number of nominated immigrants come from Asia, Africa and Caribbean this move can be criticized as discrimination by the backdown.

The issue to be faced instead is whether this category, however, well intentioned, should ever have been created. Most who qualify come not to join their family but for economic reasons and so have no cause to go to the head of the queue. In cases of real need, since immigrants are individuals, not numbers, the minister can exercise his discretionary authority.

The damnable part about the whole debate is that it is cast in negative terms. Though this country was built by immigrants and has been changed and enriched out of recognition by them, we have never had what Freda Hawkins calls "an immigration mystique." One day we will be able to look at a person and not notice if he is white, black, brown or yellow. Or her.

Taken to Task

Dr. L.C.H. Ireland in his letter of Feb. 11, has properly taken you to task for your editorial on Jan. 29, which stated that the current move to restrict the immigration of foreign medical graduates was motivated by "doctors wanting closed shop."

However, Dr. Ireland presents an incomplete view of this complex situation in spite of the length of his letter. I am saddened that neither the Times nor the medical spokesman made reference to the two volume report Health Security for British Columbians (the Foulkes report) or any of its supporting seven tomes.

During the preparation of this major study, public funds were expended to obtain the opinions of persons that are highly qualified and respected experts in this complex field. The issues are complex.

In tome two, chapter three of the support material, we made use of the very limited data available in the province to show the difference between "patient-generated" and "physician-generated" expenditures. The argument for restricting the number of physicians in any specific geographic area is largely an economic one related to these expenditures.

Dr. Ireland has a tendency to stress "patient-generated" expenditures. There is no question that the more available physicians are, the more they will be visited especially by the urban higher social classes. It has been shown also by Prof. Robert Evans of UBC and others that in an area that has a high number of physicians and therefore a "competitive" situation, doctors may have to take measures to increase their "efficiency" such as reducing time spent with the patient, referring "time-consuming" patients and depending on an increased number of laboratory tests. They also may carry out procedures and arrange for more "repeat visits" than would be the case in a less competitive situation.

The report referred to previously shows that the picture in British Columbia with regard to surgical rates, etc., is a good one and that the high consultation and surgical assistance rates are on the side of high quality. Nevertheless, it is a factor that must enter into discussions taken with regard to medical manpower.

Of even greater importance to us here in this province is the question of physician distribution and the problem of ensuring that British Columbians have the opportunity to become physicians. It is not morally wrong, either, for us to want to bias our medical education towards fulfilling the specific needs of the people of the province.

Tome three, chapter one contains a study of the issues in medical education in B.C. In this; an expansion of training facilities is recommended in order to achieve the objectives outlined in the preceding paragraph. However, we had to pose three rhetorical questions:

- "Can British Columbians justify draining other (and often poorer) provinces and countries of physicians?"
- "Is it fair to deny well-qualified, highly motivated British Columbia applicants the same opportunity to enter medical school as their confreres in other provinces?"
- "Should other provinces and countries determine, through their selection and educational processes, the nature and quality of the physicians practicing in B.C.?"

After considering these and many other relevant factors such as the need for primary physicians versus the need for specialists, an increase from the present 80 medical graduates to 200 graduates per year was recommended. But, that "this should not be undertaken unless the government can devise a mechanism to place a strict limit to the registration of all immigrant medical personnel."

It is obvious, from the efforts of the ministers of health from the various provinces and the federal government, that similar advice is being given across the country.

There is no question that the medical manpower issue, like many others, is clouded by those voicing support for (and antagonism against) a multitude of vested interests. These vested interests include the medical profession, other health professionals who are in a "competitive" situation and politicians who are becoming extremely concerned about the rising costs of health care generally.

But, since the real "winners" or "losers" are the general public, the media have a responsibility to lead the way to fruitful discussion of problems, facts, objectives, alternatives and their effects. They also, like the politicians they so often take to task, must not "shoot from the hip."

In health care issues in this province, there is a starting point for productive discussion — the green paper, Health Security for British Columbians. Why not use it? — Richard G. Foulkes, B.A., M.D., Director, Health Security Program Project, 1081 Fort Street.

Land Restrictions

With regards to Attorney-General Alex Macdonald's statement of Feb. 8, regarding foreign land ownership, a basic freedom of Canada is indeed threatened and not by Ottawa, but by the provinces. All Canadians have the right to live and own property anywhere in Canada subject to equal controls regarding the use of same. To back Prince Edward Island's stand of restricting ownership to 10 acres for all non-provincial residents is a blow against Canada's existence as a country and the rights of all Canadians.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND
... breaking up Canada?

Mr. Macdonald's support of the Prince Edward Island stance, whether realized or not, is another step in breaking up Canada. It's about time that Canadians in general realized that no individual or province has the right to set up rules which deny rights to Canadians who happen to live in other parts of the country. Your statement is no different than some people suggesting British Columbia or Quebec should separate from Canada. Who do these people think they are? British Columbia, Quebec and any other part of Canada, including the wealth in these areas, such as oil, forestry, etc., belong to all Canadians. If the majority of Canadians should vote to let an area of Canada separate or vote to restrict where and how people can live in our country, then that is a different story.

Whether or not some controls on ownership be put on non-resident foreigners is an entirely different question, and should not be lumped in with non-resident ownership by Canadians.—R. S. Miller, 1025 Inverness Street.

Immigration Review

In a recent Times editorial, the editor was quite peeved with our immigration office. It is nice to know that others have my view on this subject though mine goes father back than I care to look back on. One of my main objections is our immigration office getting the left-over appointments and should have been upgraded long ago.

The Feb. 11 issue of the Times has an article on this same subject by W. A. Wilson. In all sincerity I must reject his statement on our intolerence for those "no English need apply" advertisements, those I did not see, but I did see such slogans on an outside wall at my first adventure on leaving a rural district for the city of Winnipeg. I did not need to be told the reason for that sign. Again, in all sincerity, there was a valid reason. Even in those days we had a strong Canadian conscience over our colonial status, also the lack of a British accent. We were not British enough in the operation of our country either physical or mental. This will probably shock many of your readers. However it is one of those unwritten facts of our history.

I think I must digress for a little bit and quote an experience, so true I will take an oath in any court in Canada, even Britain. This relates to my going overseas in the First World War. I came across about 20 of those remittance men in a gathering in Canada's uniform and badges. I somehow had the temerity to ask how come you go over and fight for England when your people banished you to Canada. I was spoken to by one in all the disdain that he could muster. — "Don't be naive. Canada, our pater and mater will never see us go to war. We are just getting a free ride over." I wonder who was naive.

The very next day I came across those ethnics Mr. Wilson spoke of. Ask them the same question, their answer was quite different — to hell with England, we love Canada.

I hope this letter if printed will not shock too many. It is the reality of history. — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange Road.

Hung Up ...

After who knows how many years of pay telephones which required the user to deposit a dime before getting any service, the telephone company with its mystical sense of humor came out with a pay phone which gave you no service whatever for your dime. (You know, the one that has the cover over the coin slot that says "wait", that cover always being conveniently flipped up so you don't see it or more often, not there at all).

Now, in its continuing desire to serve the public as poorly as possible, the telephone company is sending out its bills a few days after most normal people pay their bills and demanding payment two or three days before most people have received their monthly pay cheques. How much longer must we endure this unfeeling monopoly? Why won't the provincial government take over B.C. Tel as it promised? It's an old adage that you can't argue with the telephone company. It's pretty frightening that apparently this applies to a democratic government as well.

I'm not going to "call upon free men" to ignore the bill deadline; that would only cause a few courageous citizens to be hassled by our B.C. (Ha!!) Telephone Co. and all its other bodyguards down south. There is only one way: get rid of it! Take it over! — Fed-up.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of February 19, 1915

Rev. William Stevenson, secretary of the Central and Employment Relief committee, appealed to citizens and employers for aid to the unemployed. Since the establishment of a free employment bureau four weeks ago, the committee has registered the names of 900 men, many of whom have dependent wives and children. Casual employment has been found for about 100 but work is desperately needed to tide over the remaining unemployed, "many of whom are in a state bordering on actual starvation."

Inflation Victims Hungry, Hopeless

By JAME T. OOTEN

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — When Mrs. Elsie Defratus could no longer afford the cost of living, she died.

She was nearly 80 years old, and she had survived somehow for a long, long time on her meager widow's pension, frugally measuring it against the rising prices, scrimping and scraping and skipping meals, making do with less and less each day until finally, on a recent morning at an ancient hotel in this city, she crumpled quietly to the floor of her dark and tiny apartment.

"Malnutrition," the coroner concluded.

Both may have been right, but in any case the small, emaciated woman had become the ultimate victim of inflation. Her extremity had gone as far as it could go.

For millions of other Americans, inflation's effect has been not as extreme, but it is hurting deeply nonetheless.

From one end of the country to the other, in rural hollows and small-town slums, in prairie reservations and mountain enclaves and city ghettos, it attacks the poor, the elderly, those on fixed incomes. Sometimes, it leaves them, like Mrs. Defratus, both hungry and hopeless.

President Ford, in his first few months in office, concentrated his economic policy on reducing inflation. And even though prices rose by 12.2 per cent last year — the most in 28 years — some progress was being made.

Last month, however, Ford decided that the time had come to shift the power of government from primarily fighting inflation to fighting a deepening recession, which has pushed the jobless rolls to 6.5 million, or 7.1 per cent of the work force.

For the unemployed, this shift in administration policy may mean more jobs, and hope. But for those hurt by inflation, it may mean the opposite. Many economists believe that some of the measures used to fight recession may stem the decline in inflation, or even reverse it.

If that occurs, it seems certain to provide new dimensions to the nation's long-time poverty problems. And there are already some signs that economic difficulties are putting fresh edge on traditional class, ethnic and racial antipathies.

High atop a new St. Petersburg hotel, only blocks from the old one where Mrs. Defratus died, a bartender talks about the problems of poverty.

"There are no such things," he says. "There are only those who will not work, and I say to hell with them. I work hard. Everybody I know works hard. Why can't they work hard?"

Robert Davis sat at his kitchen table in the tiny dinette of his housing-project apartment in Little Rock recently, talking with his wife and some visitors about the way he believes other people see him.

"I don't think they think much of me," he said, staring at his mud-caked, high-top shoes. "I mean, they don't think I've amounted to much as a man. Used to be, I didn't much care what they thought, but nowadays — well, I don't know. Maybe they're right."

Davis is a 40-year-old black man who works more than 40 hours almost every week on a construction crew and earns slightly more than $2 an hour. Occasionally he takes odd jobs on Saturdays to supplement his weekly earnings.

"It wasn't hardly ever enough," he said. "Not with nine kids at home. But there was a time there not too far back when we were sort of looking up. Now, I don't see nothing but down."

As he talked, his wife, 38, quietly prepared dinner for the family, a meal consisting of chicken soup, some crackers, milk for the younger children and coffee for the older ones.

She cannot remember a single moment in all of her life, she said, when she was not lacking something she really needed.

Davis said: "I always thought that the way I could work — I'm a right strong man — what we'd make it some way. Now, tell the truth, I don't think we can."

In the last few months, their utility bills have gone from $8 to $21 each month, the result of a rate increase by the local power company. The cost of their groceries has risen from about $60 a week to more than $100, even when Mrs. Davis buys less than she believes they need.

A few weeks ago, with several auto loan instalments long overdue, they chose to pay for their food and their water and their lights and their shelter, and the finance company repossessed their second-hand car.

"They just suck at the Great American Teat," he says. "That is their sole function, to milk the country."

In Seattle there is an old, beige, Victorian house at the corner of East Olive Street and 14th Avenue where every Tuesday morning hundreds of men and women — young and old, black and white — form a long line that snakes down the block.

It is a "food bank," a pick-up point for absolutely free, no-strings-attached groceries distributed by Neighbors in Need, a nonprofit group funded partly by the federal government and partly by public support.

It was formed after massive layoffs by the Boeing Company, 1971. Thousands of formerly middle-class workers were abruptly unemployed.

"We tried to fill that space between the government benefits and the needs of the people," Milton Kemp, a 28-year-old employee of the group, said. "But we're not really doing it any more. Inflation is killing us. All we're doing is just throwing a few groceries into the gap."

The group's purchasing power in the last few months has plummeted to a point at which pork and beans was listed recently as a "meat" item.

"And there wasn't any pork in those beans, either," Kemp said.

Each week, thousands of Seattle residents shuffle through one of the group's several "banks" and each week the number of its clients increases.

The people who pick up the food are a varied collection. On one Tuesday morning not long ago, a young black man and a middle-aged white woman stood next to each other in the line outside the house.

He was unemployed, and his wife's job brought the couple less than $100 each week. They have two children.

"Can't make it without these — these, well, these gifts," he said, slightly embarrassed.

"Why, if you weren't black your face would turn red," the matronly woman chided. "Shame on you. When you need help, you need help. When your babies need food, they need food, and there's nothing about that to be embarrassed about."

The young black man stared at the sidewalk. "Yes, ma'am," he said. "There is."

Negotiations Traumatic for Israelis

By TERENCE SMITH

JERUSALEM — For the third time since the October, 1973, war, Israelis are preparing for a new round of negotiations with their Arab adversaries — negotiations that inevitably result in Israeli troop withdrawals from occupied Arab territory that Israel regards as both her protection and her bargaining chips. It is a process that gets no easier with practice.

Israel underwent it a year ago January, when the first Egyptian-Israeli accord was signed and Israeli units pulled back some 12 miles from the east bank of the Suez Canal. It was repeated six months later when the bulge of Syrian territory seized during the fighting was relinquished. Now, with Secretary of State Kissinger in the area this week, the focus is once again on the Sinai.

The whole process, from negotiation to compromise to withdrawal, is a national ordeal for Israelis. It is a trauma second only to war itself that brings out their most deep-seated fears of annihilation and disaster. Israeli author Amos Oz has observed that even the native-born Sabra Israelis still live with the legacy of the Nazi holocaust.

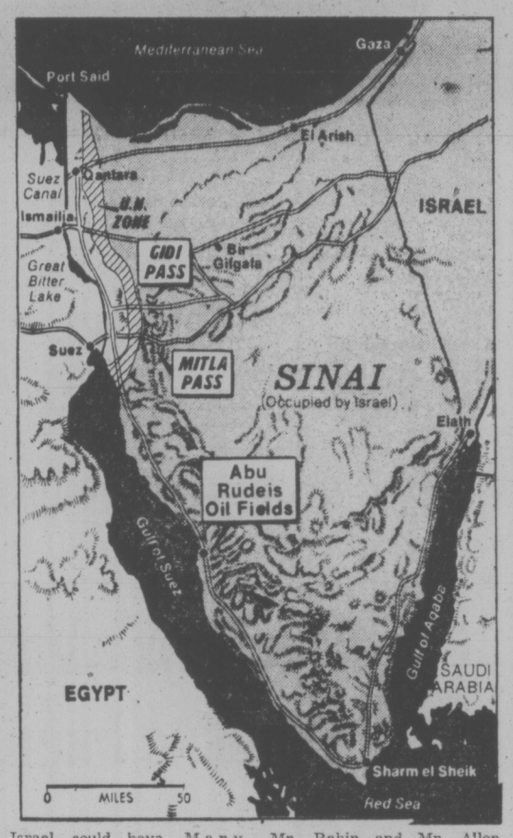
The catharsis for most Israelis is not the actual giving up of land, especially not in the Sinai, which holds little religious, historical or national significance compared to Jersusalem or even the occupied West Bank of the Jordan. Nor is it that the territory was paid for with Israeli lives. Rather it is the process itself, in which Israelis feel they are once again required to justify the existence of their country.

Beyond that, the process reminds Israelis of their dependence on the outside, non-Jewish world, which they tend to distrust. The late Premier David Ben Gurion once argued bluntly that for Israel, "what matters is what Jews do, not what the Goyim say." It is a sentiment one often hears repeated.

The prospect of another round of talks under Kissinger also reminds Israelis of their diplomatic isolation and their dependency on the United States. Stanley Hoffman, the Distinguished Professor of Government at Harvard, brought this home to a group of Israeli academicians last week when he said: "Israel has effectively ceded its diplomatic portfolio to Henry Kissinger. It still makes its own decisions in the military sphere, but the political negotiations, for all practical purposes, are left to Henry."

The fact that it is Kissinger, the first Jewish Secretary of State, who presides over the negotiation - withdrawal process doubles the irony for many Israelis. Some, the more cynical, find it perversely fitting. Others are unnerved by it. They continually ask themselves whether, because of his Jewishness, Kissinger will not bend over backward to avoid tilting in favor of Israel. The usual answer is yes.

This feeling does not extend to Premier Yitzhak Rabin and Foreign Minister Yigal Allon who remain staunch supporters of the Secretary as the best possible mediator Israel could have. Many Israelis grudgingly agree, but, unlike Mr. Rabin and Allon, they do not trust the Secretary.



As a result, a far-reaching debate has begun in Israel about whether it is worthwhile even attempting to conclude another interim agreement. Mr. Rabin and Mr. Allon, echoing Mr. Kissinger, argue that another partial agreement with Egypt will buy time for Israel — time that could serve to defuse the explosive atmosphere and open the way to more comprehensive negotiations.

Other Israeli leaders, such as Defence Minister Shimon Peres and former Foreign Minister Abba Eban, disagree. They contend that Israel must attempt to negotiate an over-all peace agreement with the Arabs at the Middle East peace conference in Geneva. They have been supported by the rightwing opposition, which denounces Kissinger's step-by-step approach as "salami tactics."

It is not that Peres and Eban relish the notion of Geneva, so much as they doubt the feasibility of concluding a worthwhile interim agreement. Their fear, expressed publicly, is that Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat simply will refuse to give the political concessions, such as a pledge of non-belligerency, that will justify a pullback from the present militarily-advantageous cease-fire line in the Sinai. Thus, they argue, if Israel must withdraw, why not go to Geneva and offer larger withdrawals in exchange for real peace?

Beyond that, many Israelis simply do not see where the step-by-step approach is supposed to lead. Or worse yet, they fear they do know where it will lead, namely, to a series of staged withdrawals in exchange for short-term and essentially meaningless agreements from the Arab states to delay the resumption of fighting.

Finally, the new round of talks revives doubts about the constancy of American support for Israel. The basic Israeli fear is that the United States will ultimately sacrifice Israel's interests in favor of improving its relations with the Arab countries.

Who Says It's Charity?

HALIFAX — The people of Ontario indirectly contribute hundreds of millions of dollars to the Atlantic Provinces every year of their lives. In Federal Equalization Grants, for instance, more than $200 million goes to Nova Scotia alone — and the bulk of that comes from Ontario. (Ontario, of course, is loaded.)

Ontario's money sometimes insulates her people from knowledge of national passions and programs. It's doubtful if many of them even know that, thanks to federal taxes, they are the generous donors to a kind of vast, national and compulsory United Appeal.

The beneficiaries are millions of their handicapped and less fortunate Canadian neighbors in every province except British Columbia and Alberta. (Those two are also loaded.)

It may puzzle those Ontario people who do know what their tax money is doing for the Maritimes to discover that many Maritimers would gladly repay them with a stiff shot in the mouth. Charity patients, of course, are seldom sufficiently grateful to their benefactors. They're greedy, too.

One reason why the Maritimers' attitude is so surly is that they have never regarded federal aid as charity. Down here, the equalization grants are not "handouts". They are rights, legitimate pay-offs from a deal Maritimers made honourably, and Upper Canadians have often betrayed.

The grants are not some sort of dole. Rather, they are an inadequate down payment on the tremendous debt central Canada owes the Maritimes for sacrificing Bluenose interests to Toronto and Montreal interests.

How so? Well let me explain. (Everyone, even an Upper Canadian, has a right to know why his neighbours are bad-mouthing him.) The reasons are old stuff but, in Canada, forever contemporary.

They bear directly on the current fury in Nova Scotia over a 25 per cent jump in railway freight rates. High freight rates are a double whammy for Nova Scotia.

By increasing the difficulty of selling Nova Scotian stuff in the big markets of central Canada, they encourage the collapse of industry — by raising the price of imports they drive up the cost of both manufacturing and living.

Down here, nothing could be a neater catalyst for the deadly chemistry of recession-plus-inflation than the jacking of freight rates.

Too bad, you say, but the railroads have got to make ends meet, too. Ah, but that wasn't the agreement. The old deal, the deal of 1867, was that the federal government would make sure the railroads gave the Maritimes a fair crack at Upper Canadian markets.

"Our railways," says G. I. Smith, the former premier of Nova Scotia, "are not simply commercial enterprises. They were a basic instrument of national policy in creating this country." And that particular national policy was an inducement to us Maritimers to abandon the material joys of free trade with our natural markets in New England.

One hundred and eight years have passed and, still, we have no policy to force the railroads to fulfill the promises of Confederation but, as sure as God made little green Annapolis Valley apples, we have a policy of tariff protection for central Canada.

"In the ten-year period between 1956 and 1965," Mr. Smith argues, "Canadians paid $613 million for the support of the national policy in the field of cars alone . . . Nova Scotians paid more than $18 million to support the protection policy, on cars alone. There are similar examples in scores of fields, such as electric appliances, industrial machinery, chemicals."

Westerners feel the same way. In the course of beating me about the head and ears for some unfriendly comments I made about Alberta's oil policy, an angry Edmontonian named F. P. Methuen seems to have mistaken me for a mouthpiece of the manufacturing moguls of Ontario.

Actually, I'm pleased to endorse his sour comment that, "After paying Ontario prices one-third to one-half higher than Montana prices for cars over the last 50 years to protect Ontario branches of Detroit manufacturers, I'm low on sympathy."

I would only add that your sympathy plummets still further when you discover that, thanks to shipping charges, those Ontario-built cars cost hundreds of dollars more in Halifax than they do in Ontario.

R. S. Matheson, an even angrier Edmontonian, says: "When we also consider that Albertans probably pay five million dollars a day over world prices for all goods manufactured in Ontario so that that province is in all likelihood receiving one billion eight hundred million dollars per year more than it is entitled to, I ask you, what point is there in our being part of this federation?"

Few Nova Scotians still ask that question but they do ask others. John Buchanan, the Leader of the Tory Opposition, wonders about the St. Lawrence Seaway for instance. The Seaway, he argues, has a deficit of more than $800 million. It loses millions every year. It has no hope of breaking even. But strangely, the federal government pays for the seaway's losses. Strangely, the feds do not raise its rates. Strangely, the feds do raise railroad freight rates, and that hurts Maritimers. Strangely, the feds spend hundreds of millions on icebreakers to keep St. Lawrence ports open in winter, and that hurts Atlantic ports.

"We must realize," Buchanan says, "that the St. Lawrence Seaway is in Quebec."

We must realize, other Nova Scotians argue, that the big companies, the money that talks, the voting power, the clout are all up there in the centre. And the Upper Canadians are giving us the gears, royally. As ever.

CHARGEX MASTERCHARGE

Characters Dictate Costumes

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

People have a tendency to think of a costume designer in the theatre as someone who is very little different to a fashion designer, says Irene Pieper.

But nothing could be further from the truth, says the University of Victoria theatre department's costume designer.

She has no interest whatever in fashion design. And when she describes her own work it is easy to see why.

The arbitrariness and artificiality of fashion designing bears no relationship to the in-depth analysis and do-it-yourself craft of designing and building costumes for the stage.

Irene has been at UVic since 1971 when she designed the last season of the summer festival, Victoria Fair.

"The stage designer designs characters, not clothes," she explains in elaborating on her theme. "You begin with the character — he dictates the design. But then this must also fit into the over-all mood of the play.

"Unity of design is of major importance and is applied as much to a single costume as to a whole production."

Irene has just completed her latest — the romantic 1840s period costumes for the UVic-Theatre Guild production of Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing which opens Thursday at McPherson Playhouse.

In the first place, she says, there are discussions and quite lengthy consultations with the director (John Krich in this case), the stage designer Bill West and a thorough reading and analysis of the play.

"The designer bears a responsibility in interpreting the play through costumes equal to that of the director who works in other ways," she says.

"What you are doing is translating the play from the printed page into theatrical terms. Color, line, mass are some or your tools."

In Much Ado, with its dual love stories and aura of youth, she has made considerable use of diaphonous fabrics and clear sun-washed color, a visit to the costume workshop reveals.

Festive gleam and lighthearted fantasy have been used in costumes and accessories for the important ballroom scene.

After you know how the play is to be interpreted, research begins — a great deal of it and much thought before you put any ideas on paper.

Irene looks at hundreds of pictures when tackling period costumes, but never copies anything directly. She makes sketches of details that appeal to her — a collar, the shape of a bodice, the arrangement of a sleeve. Later on these details may be incorporated into finished designs.

"One always has to be prepared to adjust one's designs to the fabrics or to the actor," she says. "For instance I had used a certain neckline and collar arrangement for a costume for Hero, the younger of the two female leads in Much Ado.

"But then it turned out not to suit the actress, Rosalind Scott, and had to be changed.

Fabrics in today's market create some considerable problems for designers working on a modest budget, Irene tells you. Polyester knits which are so prevalent, have to be heavily backed if they are used for items such as the military uniforms in Much Ado.

"Double knits don't dye and we have to do a lot of dyeing and texturing," she says.

Texturing is a process by which material is broken down to provide a worn, or napped appearance or to sculpt it and enhance its form.

Some of the procedures include the use of liquid bleach, sandpaper, natural sponges, paint and paintbrushes or spray cans.

There are 65 students enrolled in theatre at UVic this year. The first year students work in construction — "I insist on good sewing as a basic thing," says Irene, adding with a tinkle, "They do lots of ripping out."

During the second and third years emphasis is on sketching and pattern-drafting which includes the major skill of cutting. The fourth year course includes analysis of scripts and characters and more sketching and the attempt is made to have each student oversee a production of some kind.

Tall — she's 5' 10" — platinum blonde, strong-boned and sturdy, Irene Pieper possesses a striking Nordic beauty. But her statuesque physique is tempered by her lively interest in many things, her vitality and the pleasure she clearly takes in her craft, in teaching and in life in her adopted city.

In between teaching and creating costumes, Irene has designed her own home which is being built on a woodsy piece of property on the fringe of the university campus.

"It consists of two circles with an enclosed garden in the middle. It has lots of glass so that my two cats Niccy (for Nicodemus) and Beauregard, can see out."

She had it framed by a builder but is finishing it herself inside with cedar panelling. She laid the drain tiles and did most of the plumbing and when the good weather comes, will do the external finishing.

She is also looking forward to having her first garden and especially to cultivating fruits and vegetables.

San Francisco is Irene Pieper's home town. It was while earning her way to a degree in political science at the University of California, that she developed her natural talent for costuming.

Later she obtained a master's degree in theatre at San Francisco State University and followed this up by establishing a costume program at the University of Houston and then moving on to the University of Minnesota where she stayed for three years, supervising 26 to 30 shows a year.

She was there when Ralph Allen invited her to come to Victoria to design for Victoria Fair.

A daughter of the Pacific Coast, she was glad to leave the Midwest, happy to have the breath of the sea in her nostrils again.

An ardent traveller she tries to visit other parts of the world every year but always delights in coming back to Victoria which she now firmly regards as home.

KNIGHT 'APPOINTED'

Dr. Stanley Knight, fired from the department of education on Jan. 14, received a letter from the Public Service Commission on Jan. 22. Appointing him to a supervisory position.

A letter from Knight to premier Dave Barrett was published in Allan Fotheringham's column in Tuesday's edition of the Vancouver Sun.

Fotheringham said the letter to the premier, dated Feb. 3, was not obtained from Knight, however, he was seen in the Legislature Press Gallery about two weeks ago circulating copies of the letter.

Barrett said today the items sent to Knight are standard for anyone completing probation but that Kight received his through an error in mailing procedure.

Knight's letter said the PSC letter told him he was being mailed "a set of 'tips to supervisors' and the 'supervisor's guide for appraising employee performance.'"

Knight's letter adds he was puzzled by the PSC letter.

"Is this some kind of cruel joke of the public service commission, or simply another example of inept management? Does our elected government have any control over the bureaucracy? If not, why not?"

NOTICE OF HEARINGS

Mackenzie Valley Pipeline Inquiry

Mr. Justice Thomas R. Berger, of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, has been appointed to inquire into and report upon the terms and conditions that should be imposed in respect of the application by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Limited for a right of way across Crown lands within the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories for the purposes of the proposed Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline.

Mr. Justice Berger is to have regard to the social, environmental and economic impact in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon, of the construction, operation and subsequent abandonment of the proposed pipeline carrying natural gas from the Arctic to markets in the south. He is to consider as well the measures which Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Limited proposes to take to meet the specific social and environmental requirements set out in the Expanded Guidelines for Northern Pipelines as tabled in the House of Commons on June 28, 1972 by the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Public hearings will commence on Monday, March 3, 1975 in the Explorer Hotel, Yellowknife, N. W. T., at 10:00 a.m. The schedule for the five initial hearings is as follows:

Overview of the Mackenzie Valley, Mackenzie Delta and Northern Yukon – commencing March 3, 1975.

Phase 1. Engineering and Construction of the Proposed Pipeline – commencing March 10, 1975.

Phase 2. The Impact of a Pipeline and Mackenzie Valley corridor development on the Physical Environment – commencing (to follow).

Phase 3. The Impact of a Pipeline and Mackenzie Valley corridor development on the Living Environment – commencing (to follow).

Phase 4. The Impact of a Pipeline and Mackenzie Valley corridor development on the Human Environment – commencing (to follow).

Hearings will also be held in each community in the Mackenzie Valley, the Mackenzie Delta and the Yukon likely to be affected. Dates and places will be announced at a later date.

Hearings will also be held in major cities throughout Canada. Dates and places will be announced later.

Any person or organization desiring to make either an oral or a written submission, or both, or wishing to obtain the agenda, dates and places of future hearings should contact the Inquiry by writing:

When you want to stretch your food budget,

Campbell's makes sense!

Serve a Campbell's Soup and Sandwich Supper, and know you're serving nourishment you can afford.

Serve a Campbell's Soup and Sandwich Supper once a week.

Here's a practical way to really stretch your food budget and still provide your family with a good, hot, nourishing supper.

Choose from any of the combinations below, or make up your own. And don't forget to vary the breads. Try whole wheat, raisin, or rye now and then to bring a new flavour to your family's favourite sandwich combinations.

Put a dish of carrot, celery, or cucumber sticks on the table, give everyone a tall, cold glass of milk, and finish supper off with fruit.

And remember, children like to make their own sandwiches. Try serving Campbell's Soup along with all the makings for their favourite sandwiches. Saves you making them, and lets everyone make up the sandwich he or she wants.

Try the Campbell's Soup and Sandwich Supper tonight.

You'll find it's much more than a nourishing budget stretcher. It's a meal your whole family will truly enjoy. Just see if they don't ask for a repeat performance before the week is out.

Clip and save these Campbell's Soup and Sandwich Supper Suggestions.

Cream of Mushroom Soup with Ham and Cheese Bunwiches

Put wiener buns to a new use: butter them lightly and fill them with left-over ham and sliced cheese. Or better yet, put everything on the table and let the family fill their own buns. Garnish the bunwiches with sweet gherkins, and serve them with good hot Campbell's Cream of Mushroom Soup.

Chicken Gumbo Soup with Tomato Cheeseburgers

Everyone likes hamburgers. And when you top each with a slice of cheese and then a slice of tomato, you've got a real taste treat. Just the thing to have with Campbell's Chicken Gumbo Soup for a good, hot family supper.

Tomato Soup with Tuna and Lettuce Sandwiches

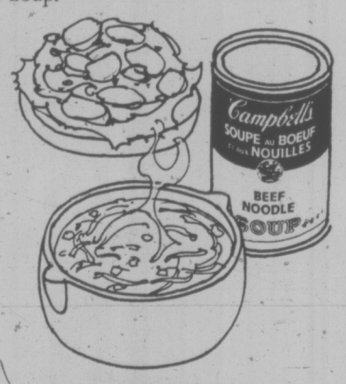
Fill mugs with hot Campbell's Tomato Soup and pass a plate of tuna and lettuce sandwiches on whole wheat bread. Put a dish of crunchy carrot sticks on the table too for an all-round good-tasting supper.

Bean with Bacon Soup and Sliced Egg, Tomato, and Lettuce Sandwiches

Put sliced hard-cooked egg with slices of tomato, a dab or two of mayonnaise, and crisp lettuce leaves into a tasty onion roll. Absolutely great with a hot bowl of Campbell's hearty Bean with Bacon Soup.

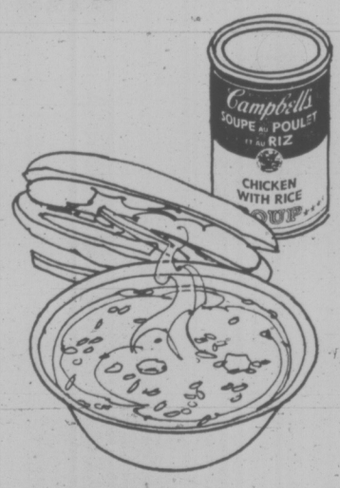
Vegetable Beef Soup with Toasted Bacon, Cheese, and Tomato Sandwiches

Oven-toast a batch of bacon, cheese, and tomato sandwiches and serve them hot with steaming bowls of Campbell's Vegetable Beef Soup. A heart-warming combination for a cold-weather supper.



Beef Noodle Soup with Chicken Salad Sandwiches

Use leftover or canned chicken to mix up your favourite chicken salad sandwich filling. And don't forget the lettuce: it adds a crunch to almost any sandwich. Serve on a toasted English muffin along with Campbell's Beef Noodle Soup for a hot, filling soup and sandwich supper.

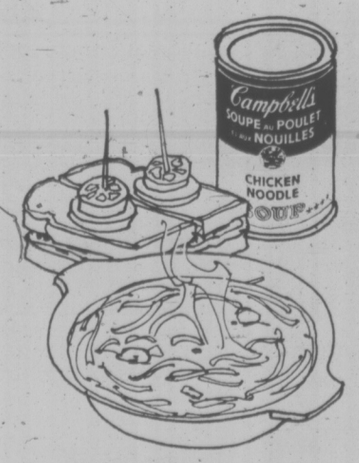


Chicken with Rice Soup and Hot Dogs

Serve hot dogs for supper and watch the children's faces light up. Try toasting the buns first, and serve the hot dogs with carrot and celery sticks on the side. Team this up with steaming bowls of Campbell's Chicken with Rice Soup.

Vegetable Soup with Sliced Meat and Cheese Sandwiches

Make up a plateful of sliced meat and cheese sandwiches: meat and cheese with a dab of mayonnaise, all served between lightly buttered slices of whole wheat bread. Serve them with steaming hot bowls of Campbell's Vegetable Soup, and pass a plateful of celery sticks.



Chicken Noodle Soup with Grilled Cheese Sandwiches

Here's a supper that includes two small-fry favourites: Campbell's Chicken Noodle Soup and bubbling hot grilled cheese sandwiches served with mixed sweet pickles. And to really dress up those sandwiches butter the outsides well and bake them in the waffle iron instead of grilling them.

Beef with Vegetables and Barley Soup with Egg Salad and Lettuce Sandwiches

If you haven't tried Campbell's Beef with Vegetables and Barley Soup, don't wait another day. It's thick and filling. And nothing compliments it like your own favourite egg salad sandwich mixture on crisp lettuce leaves between slices of raisin bread.

Charges May Face Dumpers

Saanich police may be instructed to prosecute people who dump loose trash in the temporary municipal garbage dumps set up on tennis courts and lacrosse boxes, Mayor Ed Lum said Monday night.

These emergency areas are to handle day-to-day refuse of our homeowners, not dumps for such things as old washing machines and vacuum cleaners," the mayor told council.

He made the suggestion after hearing complaints from residents living near two of the dumps.

A petition was read from residents in the Reynolds Park area.

"Your action in instructing citizens to dump garbage in municipal tennis courts is completely reprehensible."

"Slobs who live nearby (I refrain from using the term citizen for citizenship suggests some measure of responsibility) are dumping unbagged refuse in the new dump and even properly bagged refuse is being scattered about by scavenging children."

Lum said the dumping areas are being continually monitored for health hazards by Dr. Allan Arneil, chief medical health officer.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren said "the amount of garbage to date has been less than what we anticipated. We have a contingency plan to minimize use of courts if this continues."

Student Unions To Incorporate

Student union representatives from the University of Victoria and 11 other post-secondary schools in B.C. have voted to incorporate and take more political action.

The vote was taken at a recent conference of the B.C. Association of Student Unions held at UVic.

"Now we're going to do something," said one student from Vancouver's Langara College but UVic delegates were not so happy with the prospect of incorporation.

"I'd like to see the union become a little more active," said student president-elect Clay Shold, a UVic delegate to the union.

But incorporation, along with member fees, a written constitution and an elected executive all mean less "flexibility" in dealing with problems, he said.

A constitution will be prepared before the next student union meeting in six months.

"A situation might arise where we'd need to be unified," said incorporation proponent Ross Matthews of Langara College.

He and others in favor want the union more highly organized so post-secondary students can pressure governments more effectively.

One seminar labelled "our value to society," scheduled for Friday morning, fell through.

"Most people weren't too interested about our value to society," said Shold.

Truck Route Probe

The provincial highways department has agreed to study an alternative truck route that would direct truck traffic away from Jacklin Road, Sooke school board chairman Alan Littler said Tuesday.

The school board met highways officials in closed session Monday to thrash out traffic problems.

Littler said the highways officials agreed to study the board proposal that truck traffic be directed down Station Road so it won't pass Langford elementary school, disturbing classes with the noise.

The department has also withdrawn its demand that the board build sidewalks along Goldstream before it gets highways department approval of land consolidation for the new junior high school, to be built at Spencer and Goldstream, he said.

The board last month found a legal loophole that allowed it to skip getting highways' approval of the land consolidation.

French N-Test Query

VANCOUVER (CP)—David McTaggart of the Greenpeace Foundation said Tuesday the Canadian government should ask the French government if proposed nuclear testing in the South Pacific will be underground or atmospheric.

He was referring to a statement from the Japanese foreign ministry earlier Tuesday that it has received a warning from the French government to keep vessels clear of an area in the south Pacific.

The Japanese release said a note from France, which was received in mid-February, contained no mention of nuclear tests or of specfic dates.

McTaggart, captain of the Greenpeace, has led several expeditions into the South Pacific to protest nuclear testing.

Before The Judge

A 37-year-old man, with a record of eight convictions for impaired driving in the past six years, was sentenced to 13 months in jail when he appeared in Victoria provincial court Tuesday.

Allen Thomas McCracken, 1854 Stelly's Crossroad, pleaded guilty to nine driving offences including three counts of impaired driving on Sept. 6, Oct. 6, Nov. 20 and one count of care and control while impaired Jan. 28.

Judge Fred Green called the record "disgraceful" and pointed out McCracken had 35 Criminal Code convictions, 16 of which were for drinking driving offences between 1955 and 1974.

They included four prior convictions for impaired driving within the past six years, he said.

Prosecutor Nick Lang said "any disposition short of a long period of imprisonment would be quite unfitting."

"I realize I have a serious drinking problem and must be taken off the road," McCracken said. "But if I am given a long jail sentence, my common-law wife will have to go back on welfare."

In addition to the jail term McCracken was placed on 15 months probation and prohibited from driving for three years, the maximum ban a judge may impose.

Christopher Marshall, 30, of 3212 Maple, received a 21-day jail sentence after pleading guilty to being in care and control of a vehicle while impaired.

Marshall was charged following an accident at the intersection of Douglas and Tolmie Aug. 29.

In addition to the jail term, Marshall was palaced on one year probation, prohibited from driving for one year and ordered to take the impaired driver's course.

A 32-year-old man, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving, was fined $175, placed on six months probation, prohibited from driving for three months and ordered to take the impaired driver's course.

Donald Braun, of Seagirt Rd., East Sooke, was involved in a two-car collision on Superior Sept. 27, police said.

Police said Etzel was swerving as he drove north on Highway 17 on Jan. 17.

He was fined $350, placed on six months probation, prohibited from driving for 75 days and ordered to take an impaired driver's course.

★ ★ ★

Gordon Anthony Caldwell, 30, of 105 Island Highway, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving near Colwood Feb. 2, was fined $400.

★ ★ ★

Manjeet Singh Bains, 19, of 3851 Raymond, was fined $150 and placed on one year probation after pleading guilty to possession of MDA.

Crown said Bains was on probation for a related offence when searched by police Jan. 30. A syringe and four capsules of MDA were found.

"If you persist in this type of conduct, you're going to go to jail," Judge William Ostler said.

★ ★ ★

Bradley Quinn Hudson, 17, of 1151 Palmer Rd. pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and was fined $75.

Hudson was stopped in the 700-block Johnson by police Jan. 22.

For stealing a chainsaw Aug. 4, William Alfred Anderson, 19, was fined $100 and placed on six months probation.

Unified Family Courts Proposed

The gradual phasing-in of a unified family court system was a major recommendation of the fourth report of the royal commission on family and children's law tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

Also contained in the 66 recommendations was a submission that the age of majority for B.C. residents be lowered from 19 to 18.

Setting up a province-wide unified court system to take in both family and juvenile operations follows a testing of unification in a pilot project conducted last year in Surrey and which is still continuing.

The system provides short-term crisis counselling to people before the courts, juvenile or family, and a professional advisory service to judges to help them make "meaningful dispositions."

Report statistics on the cost of the unified court system in Surrey indicate finances of $28.591 monthly for a staff of 34 were necessary and about $1,000 a month for administrative costs.

Terms of the commission, chaired by Mr. Justice Tom Berger of the B.C. Supreme Court, were to inquire into all aspects of the laws of the province which relate to children and family relationsh ips and the need for alternative or ancillary social agencies and services to augment the courts.

dren and family relationships

The commission recommends that the age of adult prosecution remain at 17. A lowered age of majority from 19 to 18 would allow uniformity with most other Canadian provinces.

Also recommended are:

—that a special staff be trained within the family and children's branch to deal with particularly difficult juvenile delinquents.

—that the legal aid society provide legal services to both applicants and respondents in maintenance custody and access cases and that the attorney-general's department continue to assist the society financially in their program.

—that law schools in B.C. offer clinical training in family advocacy to all students studying family law.

—that provincial court family division proceedings be held in public and the federal government be urged to make public juvenile court proceedings.

—that judges with specialization and aptitude be appointed to the family court division if they have a special interest in cases involving families and children.

—that a new branch be established within the attorney-general's department with responsibility for providing legal and counselling services and the developmnt of a unified family court.

—that the department of human resources retain responsibility for developing programs and resources for juveniles and group homes.

Premier Barrett said Tuesday the government will be looking at the report in terms "of direction of programs, but not necessarily in terms of legislation.

"The Srrey pilot project," he said, "has shown some interesting results, but it's a tremendously expensive program.

"I've had interests, beyond being minister of finance or premier, but as a social worker," he said. "I've watched that experiment very closely; and it seems to be encouraging."

CIDC SPENDING EXCEEDS INCOME

A total of $564,275 was spent by the Capital Improvement District Commission in the last fiscal year for improvements to the Greater Victoria area.

The 1973-74 annual report of the CIDC was made public Tuesday and shows the commission spent much more than year it received in income.

A provincial grant of $250,000 combined with other earnings for a total income of $295,251. The CIDC drew on its cash in the bank for the additional $269,024 to cover expenditures, leaving $144,422 in cash reserves.

Theft, Violence Testimony Heard

Conflicting testimony was heard by a B.C. county court jury Tuesday in the trial of two men accused of robbery with violence.

William Lloyd Christie, 633 Raynor, and Victor Joseph Nelson, 474 Gorge East, were accused of holding Kewal Singh Purewal, 924 Empress, outside the Drake Hotel Oct. 2 and taking his wallet which contained $120.

Purewal said he went to the Drake Hotel by himself where he met two friends and later joined Christie who he knew because he had laid some carpet for him in his home.

After four glasses of beer, he said he left the hotel. Just outside the door Christie said "put your hands up" and grabbed him from behind while Nelson took his wallet and ran away. Purewal said Christie told him "shut up. If you make a noise we'll kill you."

He then went back into the hotel and asked a barman to phone police. Later, while in an unmarked police car, he identified Nelson who was walking on the street and police took him to the station.

He denied that Christie joked with him about his nationality.

"He just asked why I not wear turban. I said it's up to me."

He also denied a suggestion that he went outside to fight with Christie and lost his wallet then.

Constable Gerald Tutte told court he searched Christie inside the Drake Hotel after police received a call and found only a few dollars on him.

He asked Purewal to look through his pockets but didn't search him. He said he searched Nelson but didn't remember if he had any money. He also said he didn't make any notes.

Nelson didn't try to run away when apprehended on the street, he said.

Christie took the stand and said he wouldn't say Purewal had more than eight or nine glasses of beer.

Asked about references to turbans, he said "it's a kind of standing joke about turbans, not derogatory. He seemed to get upset. I said do you want to go outside."

Christie said he went outside first, followed by Purewal who said 'don't do it.'" He pushed Purewal and walked back into the hotel. He denied that he grabbed him and said Nelson remained inside the hotel.

Puget Whale Ban Asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Senator Warren Magnuson (Dem. — Wash.) Tuesday asked federal officials to call a one-year moratorium on the taking of killer whales in Puget Sound.

In a letter to the federal marine mammal commission, Magnuson said Washington State is engaged in a study of the population of killer whales in the sound. He said little is known about the population of the killer whale, both in Puget Sound as well as elsewhere in the world.

Magnuson said he would prefer that the area be designated a marine sanctuary to "make it clear that there would be no taking of killer whales — ever."

But he said he would delay recommending a sanctuary until after the issue is studied.

Some Optimism Noted on Eve Of CUPE Talks

The two sides in Greater Victoria's 3½-week-old municipal employees' dispute today expressed cautious optimism toward renewal of mediation talks scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday.

Canadian Union of Public Employees area bargaining group is prepared to respond to moves by the regional employers' group, representing five municipal and regional jurisdictions which locked out staffs following the start of a legal strike Jan. 27 by CUPE local 50 city of Victoria outside workers.

CUPE area bargaining chairman Jim Walker, president of Local 50, said the counter-proposal is prepared but will not be presented without a sign of movement from employers because CUPE made the last move before talks broke off last month.

Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional District, refused to divulge any strategy or policy emanating from the employer group's weekly meeting Tuesday.

"My hope is that CUPE will not come to the meeting Thursday with their minds made up as to process" (toward a negotiated settlement), Campbell said.

"It is counter-progressive to announce in advance what our intentions are because we want to put our arguments in a quiet, reasonable way to CUPE. This is not the time to tell CUPE through the press what we intend to do.

"I hope their position will be modified if there is going to be any progress in our talks tomorrow," the chairman said.

He said at the meeting of employers and bargaining representatives Tuesday the area-wide situation and its effects were reviewed and found to be "in reasonably good shape."

Municipalities and residents are living with contingency arrangements and are "coping well with the situation," Campbell said.

At the CUPE local level the atmosphere is relaxed as routine picketing goes on at principal municipal operations and membership looks optimistically toward progress being made Thursday.

Bargaining broke down over the wages issue with management standing firm on an offer of 15.76 per cent and the unions seeking parity with rates paid elsewhere on Vancouver Island for similar work.

'No Way' And He Took Off

"Refusal to comply with a threat of violence foiled a robbery Tuesday night.

General manager of Canada Dry in Victoria, R. W. Henderson, said he was about to make a deposit in a bank night deposit slot when a voice from behind said: "Give me the money or I'll knife you."

★

"I turned around and said 'No Way' . . . I guess he wasn't prepared for that because he just took off," Henderson said.

Henderson dropped the bag into the slot at the Bank of Nova Scotia, Hillside and Douglas, at about 6 p.m. and ran across Hillside to phone police.

He described the would-be-robber as six feet tall, weighing about 200 pounds and having a black moustache.

'Horrible' N-Sub Base Protested

Gov't Urged to Fight 'Diabolical Development'

The construction of a nuclear warhead submarine base in Washington State, only 60 miles from Victoria, today brought protests from a Victoria area environment group and from Dewdney NDP MLA Peter Rolston.

The Citizens Association to Save the Environment views the construction of the TRIDENT nuclear warhead submarine base at Bangor, Wash. on the shores of the Hood Canal with "frightening alarm," a CASE spokesman said.

"Each of the 10 submarines at this base will carry 24 nuclear tipped warheads. They will constitute a horrific threat of death and destruction to each and every man, woman and child on southern Vancouver Island and elsewhere," a CASE release states.

The 100 CASE members called on the federal, provincial and municipal governments to "vehemently protest this diabolical development."

Rolston was expected to voice his protest to the base on the floor of the legislature this afternoon.

He said he would discuss the problem in his reply to the speech from the throne because of the people of B.C. should at least protest the location of the base.

In a text of his speech released in advance, Rolston said "as the construction of this horrible . . . base proceeds, we are complicit, possibly through our ignorance, in the arms race."

TRIDENT, he said, significantly changes the U.S.A.'s position to a "first strike strategy" which can only serve to aggressively escalate the arms race.

ROLSTON
. . . appalled

Rolston told the legislature that any radioactive fallout from an attack on the base in the Straits of Juan de Fuca would affect southern B.C.

According the MLA, B.C. has been designated as the area for deflecting off-target missiles from the TRIDENT system so that the population of B.C. would be written off as "collateral damage in an initial nuclear attack."

To compound the problem he said, the base will draw foreign forces even closer into neighboring coastal waters.

Calling true peace more than just the absence of tension, Rolston said the B.C. government should formally protest to the U.S. the construction o the TRIDENT missile base.

He also called on the government to fund an independent study into the possible connection of industry and research in B.C. with the U.S. military base at Bangor.

The base has been planned for a number of years and information on it has been leaking out slowly to the public, says Rolston.

He said federal New Democrat Stuart Leggatt, MP for New Westminster, tried to have emergency debate on the matter in the federal house last December but was unsuccessful.

The CASE release called the development of the base "one of many originating from the depraved, abysmally sick minds within the American military juggernaut and the government must be halted in its tracks."

CASE asked that service clubs and organizations, as well as various government levels, voice their protests to President Gerald Ford, the Washington State Assembly and Maurice Strong of the United Nations.

'Help' for Stubborn Cases

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Greater Victoria Help Society is finding no shortage of the people it wants to help — patients with suspected nutritional troubles which produce emotional and behavioral problems.

The society was established in December in order to receive a $10,000 grant from the provincial department of health. But the people involved are the same laymen volunteers who have operated for about three years as the Victoria branch of the Canadian Schizophrenia Foundation.

Over those years the volunteers gathered a wealth of information on the bio-chemical-nutritional-vitamin approach to tackling a stubborn group of complaints ranging from hyperkinesis (overactivity) to juvenile delinquency, drug and alcohol abuse, depression following childbirth and other emotional and behavioral problems.

The foundation, and its offshoot, The Greater Victoria Help Society, is convinced many such problems stem from chemical imbalances peculiar to the patient and can be helped with controlled diet, including vitamin, mineral and enzyme supplements.

The provincial grant has enabled the society to hire for an interim period two full-time workers, Lorna McCraville and Thora Antrobus. Both women previously worked as volunteers.

Between 700 and 800 people came to the Schizophrenia branch for help over its three years, Mrs. McCarville said Tuesday. Already about 300 have come to the new society.

Most of them had been from doctor to doctor but their troubles persisted.

Mrs. McCarville said not only are the medical causes of these emotional problms difficult to pinpoint but there is considerable research constantly uncovering new information.

The society aims at assisting doctors wherever it can by supplying full case histories, information on new developments and suggesting certain tests, she said.

Doctors generally have been amenable and there is increasing interest from the medical profession in allowing the society to co-operate with them in following up cases, said McCarville.

POLLEN NOT YET READY TO DONATE HIS SALARY

Mayor Peter Pollen has yet to be convinced that he should donate his 1975 mayoral salary to the Canadian Union of Public Employees, to back up an offer he made last week.

Pollen had offered to pay his salary into the union's defence fund, if he could be shown specific, written proposals made to the city during negotiations preceding the strike by CUPE Local 50, representing 280 city outside workers.

On Tuesday, CUPE business agent Tom Smith claimed the union proposal was that outside workers receive wages equal to 10 companies in the Greater Victoria area, and added that the union was "looking forward to receiving the mayor's cheque."

Today, however, Pollen said he could recall nothing to that effect having been received in writing, although he did see union-inserted advertisements prior to the strike in which wage comparisons were drawn between CUPE rates and those of five companies — most of them monopolies such as B.C. Hydro, B.C. Telephone and Safeway.

In addition, union officials made public statements about parity with Port Alberni municipal workers, he said, "but I don't consider that specific or written."

Pollen did say that if CUPE can pass on to him an extra copy of its written proposals he would "like to review it."

The mayor was also asked why he had not picketed the Legislative Buildings for the opening of the legislative session Tuesday, as he had declared he would.

He didn't answer the question directly, but laughed and said: "I don't know, we'll just have to leave it for a while." He implied he would wait to see what the provincial budget produced in the way of help for municipalities.

max low

Quite recently a lonely man stood in the dock facing nine counts of breaking and entering. There seemed little doubt. He would end up behind bars.

But he didn't and, for a handful of people battling the odds in an old warehouse on Alpha Street, part of a dream came true.

That man, who otherwise almost certainly would have been sent to jail, signed a "contract" and was "diverted" to freedom.

His contract — moral rather than legal — was with the new Community Diversion Centre, which is funded by the B.C. Corrections Branch.

The offender, who was first approached in court and offered help by Bernie Jordens of the Community Diversion Centre, was given three years' probation by the judge. But that was after he had gone with Bernie to the centre, undergone a daily two-hour group assessment process for a couple of weeks and then drawn up his contract.

One of eight full-time and three part-time members of the centre staff, Bernie spends every morning in court deciding which offenders might be suitable for the diversion process. He looks for people whose offences are not so minor that they will just get a fine or automatic probation or for those that are so major (like robbery with violence) that they carry certain jail sentences.

When a person accepts the offer of help, he or she goes to the centre where Bernie tries to determine if that person really has the motivation to do something or is just looking for a way out and trying to stall.

Once accepted, the person is expected to sit in an assessment group with staff members, community sponsors and at least one person who has already been through the process.

"If they don't have a job, then we expect them to do some community work," says Eileen King, who, like centre director Jacqui Aubuchon, is a Sister of St. Ann.

"And we look into how they can make restitution to get them to understand their own responsibility," adds Eileen. "This is so they'll know what they've done and make amends."

A typical contract drawn up at the end of two or three weeks might include promises to be in touch regularly with one of the diversion centre workers, to attend the nearby Warehouse School (which Jacqui Aubuchon has run for the last three years) and to go with a community sponsor each month to repay debts to the person or company offended.

After the offender is put on probation, he goes back to sessions to try to help others just coming into the group. He keeps in touch with his sponsor and attends an evening group therapy session for two or three months.

—Max Low photos

Llona O'Gorman . . . aiming for stability

But, points out Llona O'Gorman, who is in charge of community liaison, it isn't overdone.

"We don't want to create a dependency on the group," she says. "Our ultimate aim is to get a person to stabilize himself in the community."

As well as Jacqui, Eileen, Bernie and Llona, there are counsellors Alan Roe and Linda Krieger, business manager Doug Munn and receptionist-secretary Susan Hebert. And there are Peter McCue, Tom Gale and Bill Maylone, three others who began as voluntary sponsors and are now on staff part-time.

Not all the centre's "clients" are recruited by Bernie. Some are referred by probation officers, lawyers or even the judge.

The formation of the centre on Oct. 1, 1971, came after a three-month study of attitudes in Greater Victoria and, says Eileen, "our dream was to find some alternative, some program or something that would replace prisons."

The women know well what's wrong with prisons. Eileen worked on programs inside Wilkinson Road jail for seven years and Llona, a mother of nine children who has long been involved in community work, helped there, too.

"We worked very hard at getting programs going there but you don't have to be there long to realize programs don't work inside a prison," says Eileen. "Everything you do is torn down by the rest of the system."

They graduated from there to Project Hope, a program operating inside and outside the prison, and finally to the Community Diversion Centre and the concept of bringing correction into the community.

So far success is difficult to measure. Thirty people have gone through the program to date. Some have written contracts and have been put on probation, several are still involved and others have dropped out.

It's too early to tell, really. But the centre certainly didn't get off to a great start. The first person came into the program on Oct. 26 and his contract was drawn up Nov. 15. Not too long afterward, though, he stole a car and smashed it up.

During the months of survey, the workers found many people who didn't favor the "soft approach."

"They want to get the danger off the streets and they feel that something magical happens up there in a prison," says Llona. "they don't realize when a prisoner comes out he is probably in worse shape than before and the danger hasn't really been taken off the street."

"Most of them aren't vicious people. They're people who can't cope with society . . . and that's what we need to help them do."

Stock Market Not Saying Much —Just Seems to Ask Questions

By LEONARD SILK

NEW YORK (NYT) — What is the stock market saying? It doesn't seem to be saying anything clearly at the moment, just asking questions: Where is the economy going? Is this a recession or a depression? Are interest rates continuing downward or does U.S. Treasury Secretary William E. Simon know what he is talking about when he says they will go up? Will President Ford listen to his cautious economic advisers, worrying about inflation, or to the politicians, worrying about unemployment and the 1976 election?

Hope springs if not eternally at least periodically on Wall Street—especially on greater volume and improved brokerage profits.

Is the stuttering market recovery that got under way last October the end of the steep slide that started shortly after the beginning of Richard M. Nixon's second term as president? Or is this just one of those intermediate rallies like the ones that marked the Great Depression?

The answer obviously depends on where the bottom lies for the national economy. That question is complicated by the even more difficult question of whether the international economy will fall apart or start recovering soon. "A riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma," as Winston Churchill once said about something else.

The crisis in the domestic American economy has started to show some signs of being unravelled, although with heavy unemployment, falling real income, falling profits and business failures as the price of ending a period of dangerous inflation.

Ashley Balden, a senior vice-president of the Guardian Life Insurance Company, was early and right on the depth and gravity of the domestic crisis—and in his analysis of its fundamental causes.

In the United States, Bladen said in a recent speech to a gathering of insurance agents, when the rate of growth of debts is significantly greater than the rate of growth of real output and real incomes for a stretch of time, the general price level will inevitably rise.

As long as the growth of debts is also greater than the rate of increase in money incomes, he continued, the burden of debt service upon incomes will also necessarily rise.

But eventually the debt burden will get so "top-heavy" that it can only be supported if the rate of inflation accelerates continuously so that the real burden of existing debts is written down.

Interest rates will climb higher and higher, Bladen observed. This will aggravate the basic problem of an excessive burden of debt service in relation to incomes. That inflationary process—and the running-up of interest rates—occurred not only in the United States but also throughout the capitalist world. It was the death of the big bull market.

Some countries (especially Britain, Italy and Japan) have suffered even more severe inflation than the United States. But the United States was the key to the world economy, and its falling dollar has seriously aggravated the stability of the entire world monetary system.

The quadrupling of oil prices by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries gave an extra twist to the global inflation.

In every major country, however, the inflation was bound to come to a halt whenever the monetary authorities decided that it had become crucial to stop accommodating an accelerating rate of inflation.

Critics accuse the Federal Reserve System of the United States of being too slow to check the inflation. After feeding too much money to the system during 1972 and 1973, however, the Fed chopped the growth of the money supply down in 1974.

In the last half of the year, the money supplied (defined as currency in circulation and demand deposits) grew only 2 per cent. In the last three months of the year, the money supply ceased to grow at all.

Interest rates soared to record heights. The United States economy shuddered and sank into the most severe recession since the Great Depression.

The domestic economy of the United States now looks as though it is groping for a bottom. Some signs indicate that it may not be more than a few months away.

But what about the international economic enigma?

Here grounds for anxiety remain stronger.

Bladen sees the root international problem as the fall of the dollar—which he believes has marked a basic change in the world's balance of power and has precipitated the oil crisis. Allowing for historical differences, he appears to see the United States losing its international position of strength and leadership, as Britain did in the 19th century.

The lack of a strong lead from the United States Government is disturbing to those fearful of a breakdown in the international system.

With all the risks, however, and with some exceptions, the Western economies seem to be weathering the shocks of recession and energy crisis remarkably well.

The president appears to have little or no chance of getting his package of energy taxes and tariffs. And most economists think it's a good thing that he doesn't, given the weakened condition of the American economy and the remaining dangers of inflation.

Thus grave risks remain at home and abroad, but the positive factors holding the domestic and world economies together should not be underestimated. The dangers of a battle among the advanced capitalist countries are well recognized and appear likely to be avoided. The international monetary system, with managed floating exchange rates, is holding together. Inflation, throughout the Western world, is coming down.

The stock market, therefore has justification for some degree of hope. But anyone ready to relax about the domestic and world economy doesn't understand the gravity of the present crisis.

Copper Shipment Cuts Continue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reduction in copper shipments to Japanese smelters by about 15 per cent will continue for at least a few more months, B.C. mining officials said this week

In announcing continuation of the reductions, made at the request of Japanese customers, the mining men denied a printed report that the Japanese had asked that the figure be raised to 30 per cent.

The denial was reported here Monday by a mining group which met with Japanese government officials last week in Tokyo.

"We met government officials and told them the story of the impact on our companies of reductions of concentrate shipments to Japan," said Little. "The was the purpose of the meeting. Details of contracts are always between companies."

He said a report had circulated that Mitsubishi had requested a cut of 30 per cent in shipments from its Philippine supplier, but this was denied

"A number of smelters to whom B.C. companies ship asked for a voluntary 15 per cent reduction from 1974 levels for December and January," he said. "Most companies acknowledged this and expected to continue it in the next quarter and to examine it from time to time."

Little said that, in general, there is too much copper in the world market. He said Canadians until late last year were selling 300,000 tons of copper in concentrates to Japan. The country's normal consumption is 1,150,000 tons but in 1974 it was down to 750,000 tons.

Japan's stockpile has grown because, among other things, it has reduced its exports of copper metal. This has been done to accommodate other countries.

He said the U.S. industry also is cutting back. Kennecott had laid of 1,200 men from a work force of 7,200 and cut back from a seven to a five-day week.

SWISS FRANC FORGES AHEAD

Associated Press

The Swiss franc rose 68.9 per cent in value against the United States dollar between May, 1971, and the end of last month, the Swiss Credit Bank said Tuesday. The dollar's decline against the strong franc was worse than that of most other major currencies.

The bank, one of Switzerland's three largest, said the franc has risen an average of 47.2 per cent against 20 major currencies since May, 1971.

The Swiss franc rose 74.4 per cent against the Italian lira in the same period and 73.6 per cent against the British pound. It rose 10 per cent against the West German mark, 34.1 per cent against the French franc and 38.4 per cent against the Japanese yen.

Among other economic developments:

—The executive commission of the European Common Market reported in Brussels that investment, industrial production and consumer prices are all showing a tendency to slacken in the nine market countries.

—A survey published by The Economist in Britain showed oil-exporting countries were far more generous in sharing their wealth with poor countries last year than were the Western, industrial countries. But it said the grants and loans were often handed out in haphazard fashion with little investigation of proposed projects.

The upward march of the Swiss franc has caused increasing concern to the country's export and tourist industries and prompted the national bank to take drastic measures against the continued inflow of speculative foreign funds.

Non-residents of Switzerland who have opened Swiss franc deposits exceeding 100,000 francs or increased them after last Oct. 31 now are taxed with a punitive commission of 10 per cent per fiscal quarter.

The measure has not significantly helped the U.S. dollar, which has recently traded at less than 2.50 francs, compared with 4.32 francs before May, 1971. The dollar has been formally devalued twice since then and has also been allowed to float to find its own level.

The Common Market report said a survey taken in October and November predicted that the increase of industry investment would fall off in France, Belgium and Britain—in Britain to 7 per cent from 28. It indicated a slight increase in Italy and an increase of five per cent in West Germany, compared with two per cent in 1974.

Revenues Increase For Amtrak

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government railroad corporation, Amtrak, reports that it carried more passengers and had higher earned revenues in 1974 than during any year since its founding in 1971.

It was spurred especially "during the more acute phases of the energy crisis when demand often exceeded our capacity," Amtrak said.

In addition the trains were running more and more on time, 75.3 per cent compared with an average of 61.7 per cent in 1973, even in the face of increasing demand for service, Amtrak said.

Amtrak President Roger Lewis in his annual report also said "the Amtrak nationwide ticketing and reservation system was completed in 1974, enabling our ticketing and reservation personnel to provide far better service than ever before.

"Without this system our daily call capacity in the summer was 50,000. By last summer we were able to handle as many as 78,000 calls a day, with a higher degree of efficiency."

Lewis said Amtrak initiated seven new routes during 1974 with the financial participation of Illinois, Michigan and New York and two at the direction of Congress and the secretary of transportation.

Amtrak said earned revenues from 1974 were $256.9 million, which was $54.8 million higher than 1973 and $94.3 million higher than 1972. Total passengers carried in 1974 exceeded 18.5 million—a 10 per cent increase over 1973, Amtrak said.

East Europe Ducks Inflation's Punch

By DUSKO DODER

PRAGUE (WP) — While the industrialized West is reeling under the impact of high energy and raw materials prices, the Communist countries of East Europe seem to be prospering in an economic world of their own.

So far, East Europeans have felt few of the troubles that have hit elsewhere. Inflation is artificially kept to roughly 3 per cent per year, while real wages and standards of living are rising. Shop windows offer a profusion of goods as never before.

One of the basic reasons is that the availability of Soviet energy and raw materials at prices well below world levels has allowed East European governments to reap solid political and economic benefits.

At the same time, the Soviet Union has conosolidated its economic and political hold on the region.

To some local and foreign observers, this economic stability is less solid than it looks. And East European economists say that prices will have to rise eventually.

"The way we are operating now is like in a hot-house," said one Polish economist. "We cannot do this forever, protected from the winds of world economic storm. Eventually we will have to stand the weather."

An effort is under way to revise the entire price structure of Comecon—the Soviet bloc equivalent of the Common Market — which includes the Soviet Union, Poland, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

The revisions are to be implemented gradually, apparently approaching world levels by 1978. Any sharp increases in retail prices on basic commodities could create severe social and political dislocation and after four years, memories are still fresh here of massive Polish worker riots against food price increases. The riots forced the downfall of Communist party chief Wladyslaw Gomulka.

Each member conducts roughly two-thirds of its foreign trade with other Comecon countries. This is, as one Czech economist put it, "a stabilizing factor in an unstable world."

In addition, state subsidies are used to keep retail prices down. Wholesale prices in Hungary, for example, increased by roughly 8 per cent on Jan. 1, but the government remains committed to keeping retail prices down through this year. The effort will continue even though the price of Soviet oil is to double this year.

"There are certain dangers in this situation," said Otto Gado, deputy chairman of Hungary's state planning commission, in a recent interview. "We are telling our people that we are subsidizing consumer prices from state funds. But the treasury is not without a bottom."

Hungarian economist Bela Csicos-Nagy, director of the International Price and Materials Office, said that in addition to subsidies, the government is using corporate taxes on state industries and other financial devices to keep the economy on an even keel.

But, he added, if the world economic situation does not improve over the next three years, "We will have to accept a decline in our economic growth."

In Poland, the government decided to impose a one-shot "wealth tax," a levy on all Poles whose personal assets exceed $35,000.

Oil and energy are major concerns. All East European countries except Romania import more than 90 per cent of their energy needs from the Soviet Union, and the prospective doubling of the price of Soviet oil will be a heavy burden. Czechoslovakia officials stress that even the higher price will be "only one-half the world price."

In subsequent years, as the price of energy increases, prices will increase on East European finished products exported to the Soviet Union. These increases, however, are not expected to cover the higher energy costs.

Comecon arrangements and accompanying benefits over the past 18 months have generated a genuine impetus for greater integration in all capitals except perhaps Bucharest.

The Hungarians cite an ad hoc benefit: following a European Common Market embargo on meat imports, the Hungarians were stuck with some 60,000 tons of meat until the Soviet Union bought the meat and, it is said, paid in hard currency.

The Soviets, in turn, have pointed out that they will soon face shortages of raw materials if they continue to meet Eastern Europe's growing demands. They have urged their clients both to seek alternate sources of oil and raw materials and to invest in raw material exploitation in the Soviet Union.

"The capitalist market has had and will have an impact on Comecon prices," said one Czechoslovakian economist.

"The question of prices remains a problem which cannot be solved by the best socialist economists. And planning for the next period is a very hard job. We are not hiding that fact.

"Even though there is a basic agreement, there are lots of problems among us. Each of us thinks about his own economy first. But the question of pricing must not violate the basic relations."

Bill Won't Curb Clamps by U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — Herb Gray said today that, government statements to the contrary, a bill progressing through Parliament will provide no solution to the problem of United States law stopping exports from Canada.

The MP for Windsor West said the proposed Canada business corporation act, which has passed the Commons and now is before the Senate, will have no immediate effect on the manner in which the U.S. Trading with the Enemy Act hurts Canadian exports.

The government says a proviso calling for a majority of Canadians on the boards of directors of federally-incorporated companies will help solve the problem.

Mr. Gray was in the unique position of being an MP testifying before a senate committee about a bill he helped write before being dropped last August as minister of consumer and corporate affairs.

He said his Liberal colleagues are wrong in implying that the bill—which he says has been watered down—will stop the U.S. legislation hurting exports to Cuba by Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. corporations.

Text of Mr. Gray's remarks to the Senate committee were released in advance.

He said if speedy action against the U.S. law is wanted, some of the proposed amendments to the Competition Act could be removed and introduced as separate legislation.

Among these proposed amendments is one that would make it illegal for Canadian companies to obey foreign law if Canadian trade suffers as a result. Mr. Gray noted that the competition bill still is before the Commons and will not be law for a considerable time. A separate bill containing just that one provision could expect speedy passage through Parliament.

Mr. Gray said the proposed legislation will have little if any effect on U.S. law for a variety of reasons.

These included that companies need not adhere to its provisions for up to five years and shareholders could overrule decisions of boards of directors.

Also, most companies are incorporated under provincial law and thus not subject to this legislation.

There was no provision that some top officers be Canadian. Yet it was these officers, rather than directors, who generally made decisions about exports.

The legislation had been watered down by deletion of a provision under which the Canadian majority would have been composed of outside directors, as opposed to employee-directors.

He said employee-directors, now allowed under the bill, would be tempted to follow the directions of U.S. officers.

Finally, U.S.-owned companies which did not want to abide by the law could seek provincial incorporation.

Mr. Gray said the corporations act could be strengthened to deal with the issue of foreign law.

It could be made mandatory that there be a Canadian majority on boards in six months, not five years; the majority could be made up of outside directors, not employee-directors; shareholders could be forbidden from interfering with transactions that offend U.S. law.

He also suggested that it could be made compulsory for all companies, provincially- and federally-incorporated, to have a Canadian majority of directors. He added there could be a federal monitoring program to see that export orders are not turned down because of U.S. law.

What the proposed legislation does do, Mr. Gray said, is leave the government in the position, if challenged, of being able to say it got carried away in responding to public demands for action in this area.

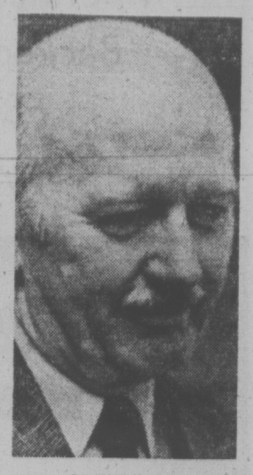
CBC HIT AGAIN

OTTAWA (CP) — A recent CBC television program was "obscene and profane" in its portrayal of the town of Trail, as "an industrially-polluted sinkhole," Progressive Conservative Bob Brisco said Tuesday.

Brisco, a Trail chiropractor who represents Kootenay West, was assured in the Commons by Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner the complaint—one of several recently about CBC programs— will be investigated.

He was referring to the program Pacificanada, which last week ran a National Film Board documentary filmed during a strike last summer at the huge Cominco plant in Trail which employs 3,000 of the town's 10,000 residents.



McKINNON

ONE RRSP SCHEME 'PUSHED ON FORCES'

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is pushing armed forces personnel to invest in a registered retirement savings plan offered by Canada Trust Ltd., Allan McKinnon (PC — Victoria) said Tuesday.

The charge was denied in the Commons by Defence Minister James Richardson. All personnel are free to invest with any company they choose, he said.

He told reporters later that Canada Trust was recommended by the defence department after a study of savings plans offered by various companies. But there was no obligation to join and no complaints from enlisted men.

MacKinnon said base commanders were advised by memo that Canada Trust had been selected. They had been told to let company salesmen enter military property.

Canada Trust is owned by Huron and Erie, a company whose board of directors includes a former national president of the Liberal party, he said. But as far as he knew there was no connection with Richardson's family interests in securities.

MacKinnon quoted the memo as saying Canada Trust was picked over 144 other companies studied by the defence department. No tenders were called in the process, he said.

Richardson said the selection was made "almost like a bid process" even though formal bids were not submitted.

Tax Bill Inches Closer

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons continued to plod nearer to completion of the government's huge income tax bill Tuesday, wading its way through detailed clause-by-clause study and a pile of technicalities.

One of the major obstacles continued to be resources taxation provisions which the opposition has fought steadily. Tuesday was the 14th day of consideration since it was introduced Dec. 20.

The government says rebates from 1974 income tax returns cannot be mailed until the bill is passed.

Cyril Symes (NDP — Sault Ste. Marie) was incredulous when tackling Bud Cullen, Finance Minister John Turner's parliamentary secretary, on the proposed tax write-offs for mining and oil companies.

The bill would allow companies to write off the full cost of exploration when computing income tax.

Gov't Won't Act On Bi-Bi Bill

ACTION IN HOUSE TO PROTECT FLAG

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to make it illegal to degrade, mutilate, desecrate or insult the Canadian flag moved one step closer to parliamentary approval Tuesday. Introduced by Leonard Hopkins (L — Renfrew North-Nipissing East), the bill was given approval in principle and referred to committee for detailed study.

Macdonald Supports Syncrude Figures

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday the government stands by the estimate of $2 billion for the Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil sands project in north-eastern Alberta.

Opposition members in the Commons said a consultant's report shows costs for the project have reached $2.9 billion, but Macdonald said the figure includes some costs to be borne solely by Alberta.

For instance, the province was to pay for a utility plant and pipeline for the project, plus municipal services in the Fort MacMurray area.

Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta has estimated costs of those items at $400 to $600 million.

Energy department officials also said the consultant's estimate includes $500 million in interest payments, but Syncrude will not now be borrowing the money it needs.

Ottawa, Alberta and Ontario agreed earlier this month to invest $600 million in Syncrude, joining three multinational oil companies in the consortium.

Imperial Oil Ltd., Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and Canada-Cities Service Ltd. agreed to add an additional $400 million to the $1 billion they already have committed to the project.

One-half the additional oil company investment is being provided through a loan from the Alberta government.

But the oil companies borrowing the money will be liable for the interest payments, not the Syncrude consortium.

OTTAWA (FP) — Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp indicated in the Commons Tuesday that the government will not move to disallow Quebec's controversial Bill 22.

Replying to a question from Rod Blaker (Lib. Lachine-Lakeshore), Sharp acknowledged that a petition from the Quebec Association of Protestant School Boards, containing some 47,000 signatures, had been received.

Sharp said the petition would be studied by the cabinet.

"I can only say that on questions of policy the Prime Minister has indicated on certain occasions the general attitude the government would take on these matters namely, that the disallowance is a procedure which has not been in effect for many years, and we are most reluctant to employ it," he said.

Sharp added that if there were a private action in the courts against Bill 22, the government might be disposed to participate.

Mounties Backed FBI 'Spy'

OTTAWA (CP) Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Tuesday a Florida man who spied on Maoists in Canada for the FBI did so with RCMP approval.

The minister said in an interview that John Burton, 42, an FBI informer, came to Canada after the agency received permission from the RCMP.

But he could not account for all the trips Burton alleges he made to Canada.

Burton told the New York Times recently he posed as a Marxist for more than two years beginning in May, 1972, to infiltrate revolutionary groups in the United States, Canada and other countries.

The Times said a housewife who did not want to be identified said she had worked in Canada and other countries collecting information for the FBI.

Allmand said he does not know about the alleged trips of the woman and he cannot account for six of the 10 trips that Burton alleged to The Times he had made to Canada.

But the minister said the RCMP has assured him that neither the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) nor the FBI would risk sending agents to Canada secretly.

Burton said in interview with The Times and a CBC radio program that his job was known only to a few people in the FBI.

A great NABOB innovation!

Up until now, coffee beans were blended, then roasted all together. But coffee beans come in different types and sizes—each with their own flavour peak.

One roast for all—the way of other coffee brands—can over-roast the small-size beans, under-do the bigger ones. Some of your coffee flavour goes missing.

Nabob's changed all that. Custom Roasting means Nabob roasts each type and size of bean separately, to its own unique perfection. Only then does the famous Nabob blending begin.

The result is a truer coffee taste. Richer, better flavour than you've ever experienced. Coffee satisfaction only Custom Roasted Nabob can give you.

Why stay with coffee "has-beans"? The quicker you try Custom Roasted Nabob, the sooner you'll taste the difference Custom Roasting makes. Clip the coupon and take it to your grocer tomorrow. You'll discover—only Nabob does your coffee this good.

Cougar Scorers Hot But Tiger Coach Boils

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

There still is some breath left in the Tigers even though only steam was evident Tuesday night after Victoria defeated the Hatters 9-6 in their important Western Canada Hockey League meeting at Memorial Arena.

Shupe accosted both as they headed for the officials' dressing room.

The maddest Hatter felt "there is no way" two Victoria goals should have been allowed. He referred to a goal by Cougar centre Mel Bridgman and Jim Gustafson's second of the night.

Bridgman's 51st of the season touched off a five-goal spurt by the Cougars. Gustafson's questioned goal proved to be the game-winner.

Bridgman's goal, Shupe contends, was offside while Gustafson's shouldn't have been allowed because Cougar winger Don Cairns was in the Medicine Hat goal crease.

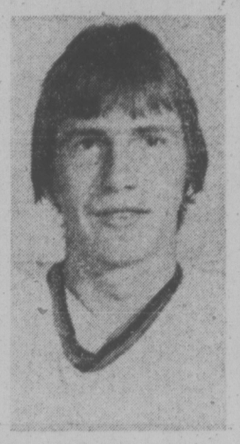
Bridgman did appear offside but initially failed to touch the puck. He skated back into neutral centre-ice territory. The puck was left untouched, about three feet inside the blueline, when Bridgman suddenly wheeled back into Medicine hat territory and went on to score.

When Bridgman came out ofthe Medicine Hat zone, the offside was waved off by Don Funk, the game's other linesman.

But Medicine Hat's annoyance with the officials couldn't detract from a highly-entertaining game. The Tigers trailed 3-1 at one stage in the first period but went ahead 6-4 in the second period before the Cougars launched their final five-goal spurt.

It was that kind of a game.

Dan Lucas and defenceman Rick LaPointe also scored two goals each for the Cougars while Curt Fraser and Gord Roberts added the other singles.



JIM GUSTAFSON
. . . outstanding effort

After Murdoch and Lomas scored Tigers' final two goals within 15 seconds, Cougar coach Pat Ginnell replaced Rogers with Bob Leslie. Getting better defensive protection than offered Rogers, Leslie blanked the Tigers the rest of the way.

Cougars came up with a strong team effort. Bridgman, Tim Williams, Cairns, Gustafson, Al Hill, Irv Bowles, Peter Morris and Lucas all had outstanding games.

The result boosted the Cougars eight points ahead of the Tigers. Medicine hat, however, has four games in hand and the West's top two teams must face each other twice more before the schedule ends.

That's why the Tigers, a good team, are still breathing.

Bridgman picked up two assists along with his goal to run his point total to 123, seven ahead of Lethbridge's Bryan Trottier. The No. 2 man in the individual scoring race, Trottier managed one assist as Lethbridge bowed 5-2 to the Clubs in Winnipeg.

'Mr. Hockey': Some Call Him 'Big Al'

If you addressed a letter to "Mr. Hockey" in Victoria, to whom would it be delivered? Well, Lawrence Huck thinks he has the answer.

"I believe it would go to Alex Leatham," he says, "and after seeing his track record, I'm sure you will agree."

Actually, this should come under the heading of the Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner awards selection committee, but it is presented here as a tribute to Alex, and to outline to many just how much work one man can put into the lives of others.

I know Alex, played softball with him, and if he couldn't hit for scur apples, he's certainly made up for that deficiency with his contribution to the youth of our town.

And even ignoring the fact that he was at one time involved in baseball and lacrosse, and also played some hockey, it was in 1962-63 that he was formally introduced to the Victoria Minor Hockey Association.

He obviously liked what he saw, because he is still there; and his list of official appointments in that 13-year period read something like this: coach, midget house team; midget divisional chairman; coach, juvenile house team; peewee rep coach; head coach VMHA; coach, midget rep team; head coach, VMHA; trainer, Victoria Nixons Jr. B team; member of the head coaches committee . . . well, you get the idea . . . because there are more.

Never Too Late to Learn

"Guide Lines," explains Huck, "tell the other part of the story — time spent. House team, two-three hours a week; divisional chairman, six-seven hours a week; rep team, seven-eight hours a week; head coach, any estimate is an under-estimate of the time he puts in."

He's been honored by the association. On Minor Hockey Night in 1972 he was presented with an appreciation award, and on Minor Hockey Night in 1973 he was presented with a life membership in the Victoria Minor Hockey Association.

These are perhaps the better publicized events, but the guy running around the rink most nights, even mornings, with a pocketful of tape and bandaids and offering first aid to anyone who might need it, is likely the same Alex Leatham. And quite often he doesn't really bother about leaving Victoria at vacation time. For several years now he has given up his summer holidays to coach at the Esquimalt Hockey School.

He believes in that old adage, that it's never too late to learn, and although, as Huck states: "He is probably one of the most knowledgeable persons about hockey in Victoria, he has attended several coaches clinics himself, one of which was at UBC for a week and his most recent journey was to Howie Meeker's clinic in Vancouver last fall."

For the Underprivileged

Then there's another part to Alex Leatham.

For the past eight years minor hockey has had an anonymous donor who each year gives a substantial amount to help out any underprivileged boys who would like to play hockey but can't afford the equipment.

This now is referred to as "The Alex Leatham Trust Fund" and each season Alex picks out a couple of lads, outfits them and starts them out in hockey. Not only does he start them out, but for the first half dozen skating sessions he personally sees to it that they get the proper advice and coaching.

He also has had two of his own youngsters go through the minor hockey ranks, but it is always doubtful if he ever spent as much time with them as he did with others. Because simply he will help anybody, so much so that there are often so many youngsters around him that he has been referred to as looking like the Pied Piper.

Maybe he is, but it just so happens that I think the executives, coaches and players, and those who know him best, have a better name for him, hat and all. Because that hat of his is a trademark too.

It's "Big Al". Not because of his size (which is probably why he wears the hat), but because of his heart and that totally unselfish interest in youngsters.

"Mr. Hockey"? If could be.

Sentiment Has Limits

By The Canadian Press

When its comes to winning hockey games, there's no room for sentiment or hometown loyalty.

Coach Floyd Smith of Buffalo Sabres and goalie Billy Smith of New York Islanders are unrelated but they both grew up in Perth, Ont.

Tuesday night Floyd felt badly for Billy because of a tactical error he made, but he was glad of the mistake's result—a 3-2 win for Buffalo in a National Hockey League game.

The move backfired when he missed, the puck, Craig Ramsay of the Sabres pounced on the loose puck and easily pushed it into the open net for what proved to be the winning goal.

"I hated to see Billy make that mistake of coming out of the goal then," Floyd said. "We're from the same hometown and you don't like to see a guy that you know and like make that kind of mistake."

"But I'll take it. That's the bounce of the puck. That's what wins games,"

In Tuesday's other NHL games, Los Angeles Kings whipped Washington Capitals 6-1, Montreal Canadiens tied St. Louis Blues 4-4 and New York Rangers tied Kansas City Scouts 2-2.

Don Marcotte and Bobby Orr gave Boston the early lead and Wayne Cashman's goal in the third period put the game out of reach of the Canucks. Don Lever scored the only Vancouver goal.

Mike Murphy scored twice in the first period to give the Kings a 2-0 lead. Later they got goals from Bob Berry, Butch Goring, Bob Nevin and Dan Maloney to end Washington's three-game home winning streak.

Off the ice, Tom Lysiak of Atlanta Flames faces charges of driving under the influence, driving without a licence and driving on the wrong side of the road after his car struck another vehicle Monday night.

The Flames' top scorer, who was released on $500 bond, was not injured in the accident and practised with the Atlanta team Tuesday He was ordered to appear in court March 27.

Maryland Crowd Almost Gratified

By The Canadian Press

For 20 minutes Tuesday night, Baltimore Blades might have had Maryland hockey fans thinking they were going to see their World Hockey Association team win a game at last.

A Baltimore crowd of 3,324 saw the Blades emerge from the first period with a 2-0 lead against Winnipeg, but then Bobby Hull and his linemates took charge and the Jets walked away with a 5-3 win.

It was the seventh appearance at Baltimore's Civic Centre for the Blades since their transfer from Michigan and the home customers still haven't seen a win.

Things have gone from bad to worse for the Blades since the league approved their departure from Detroit's Cobo Arena. Representing Michigan, they had a 13-27-3 record, but they've won only one of 13 games since then.

In Tuesday's other WHA games, Edmonton Oilers topped New England Whalers 6-3, Vancouver Blazers trounced Indianapolis Racers 9-2 and San Diego Mariners humbled Phoenix Roadrunners, 7-0.

Hull and linemate Anders Hedberg each had a pair of goals for the Jets. Danny Gruen had the other Winnipeg goal. Hull, Hedberg and the third member of their line, Ulf Nilsson also drew an assist each.

Bill Evo and J. P. Leblanc gave the Blades a 2-0 lead in the first period and Gary Veneruzzo made it 3-1 for Baltimore in the second period after Hull scored his first goal.

Browning Coaches Rocks

Archie Browning's name is the prominent one among the new-look executive that will guide Victoria Shamrocks in the Western Lacrosse Association.

Kowalyk had asked to step down and plans to try out as a player this season.

A standout player with the Shamrocks during their glory days in the early 1950s, Browning recently was voted into the lacrosse Hall of Fame.

He coached the junior Shamrocks to two national finals and last year coached Esquimalt Teamsters to the Canadian junior "B" final. As well, Browning was instrumental in forming the Esquimalt Minor Lacrosse Association and was its first president.

A team director for several years, Merv Gibson has succeeded Norm Kowalyk, Ed's brother, as team manager.

Another long-time director, Ray Farmer has succeeded Chris Randall as club president.

Both Norm Kowalyk and Randall will remain as directors. In addition, Norm has agreed to act as the team's equipment manager and will assist Gibson with managerial duties.

Randall also will serve as treasurer and publicity director.

B.C. Volleyball Teams Showing Early Power

Times News Services

LETHBRIDGE — British Columbia's volleyball teams and Nova Scotia boxers shared the spotlight on Day No. 7 in the third annual Canada Winter Games.

B.C.'s volleyballers, served strongly by Vancouver Island athletes, emerged with the leads in their respective division.

Nova Scotia, which has not yet won a gold medal here, got off on the right foot in boxing with five wins in seven bouts at nearby Claresholm, site of the fistic competition.

Hockey accounted for the only other competition on Tuesday's schedule, a rather "quiet" one with no medals being awarded. Figure skating, weightlifting, judo and table tennis events were scheduled to start today.

Manitoba, defending both men's and women's title, shared the volleyball spotlight with B.C. Like B.C., the 1971 gold medallists are unbeaten after two days' play.

B.C. women, coached by Kent Andrews of the University of Victoria and including Victoria players Karen Egger, Dianne Pendray, Linda Chiu and Shelley Godfrey, also are unbeaten. They top the "B" women's division with a 2-0 record while Manitoba, Alberta and Nova Scotia shared the "A" lead with similar marks.

In hockey, defending champion Ontario defeated Yukon 4-1 and Nova Scotia kept pace by defeating Northwest Territories 11-2. Saskatchewan won its first by beating B.C. 10-5; Alberta battered Prince Edward Island 13-2; Quebec beat New Brunswick 7-5 and Manitoba defeated Newfoundland 7-1.

A Tuesday story erroneously reported British Columbia finished third in the badminton competition. The team actually won the second-place silver medal while Quebec took the gold.

MALE ATHLETE RACE BOILS DOWN TO THREE

Middle-distance runner Tom Griffin, wrestler George Richey and softball-basketball star Bob Burrows have been chosen by a panel of seven sports writers and broadcasters as finalists in voting for Victoria's male athlete of the year.

The eventual winner will be announced March 10 at the ninth annual Sports Celebrity Dinner in the Empress Hotel.

His list of accomplishments last year includes record-setting victories in the B.C. juvenile championship open 800 metres (1:52.4) and 1,500-metres (3:52.4); wins in the same events at the B.C. Junior Olympics; first place in the Portland Rose Festival mile run with a record time of 4:11.2; the Vancouver Island high school cross-country title and second place in the B.C. high school cross country championship.

Richey, 23, a is a third-year physical education student at the University of British Columbia.

His spectacular 1974 season included wins in all 28 of his matches for UBC in intercollegiate meets, and the Canada West University Athletic Association. He also won the B.C. senior titles in the 198-pound division.

Burrows, who will be 28 on the day of the dinner, had an outstanding season with Victoria Bates' senior "A" fastball team and is currently playing a leading role for Victoria Scorpions, who are within one victory of qualifying for the Canadian senior "A" basketball championship in Winnipeg next month.

A finalist at previous dinners while playing professional baseball in the Kansas City Royals' organization, Burrows was named second-team catcher on the Northwest International Fastball League all-star team.

Bad-Luck String Dogging Lakers

By The Associated Press

Coach Bill Sharman, accused of breach of contract by Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association, is off in Salt Lake City attending the trial.

Towering centre Elmore Smith, the latest of a long line of casualties, is out of action with what is described as an irritation of the colon.

Garrett, a reserve forward, scored 21 points and Boerwinkle, filling in for the injured Nate Thurmond, had 12 points and 20 rebounds as Chicago Bulls pounded the slumping Lakers 128-105 Tuesday night in a National Basketball Association game.

Elsewhere in the NBA, New Orleans Jazz whipped Philadelphia '76ers 103-85, Buffalo Braves beat Phoenix Suns 124-109 at Toronto, New York Knicks edged Golden State Warriors 99-98, Houston Rockets trimmed Portland Trail Blazers 107-83 and Milwaukee Bucks downed Cleveland Cavaliers 104-93.

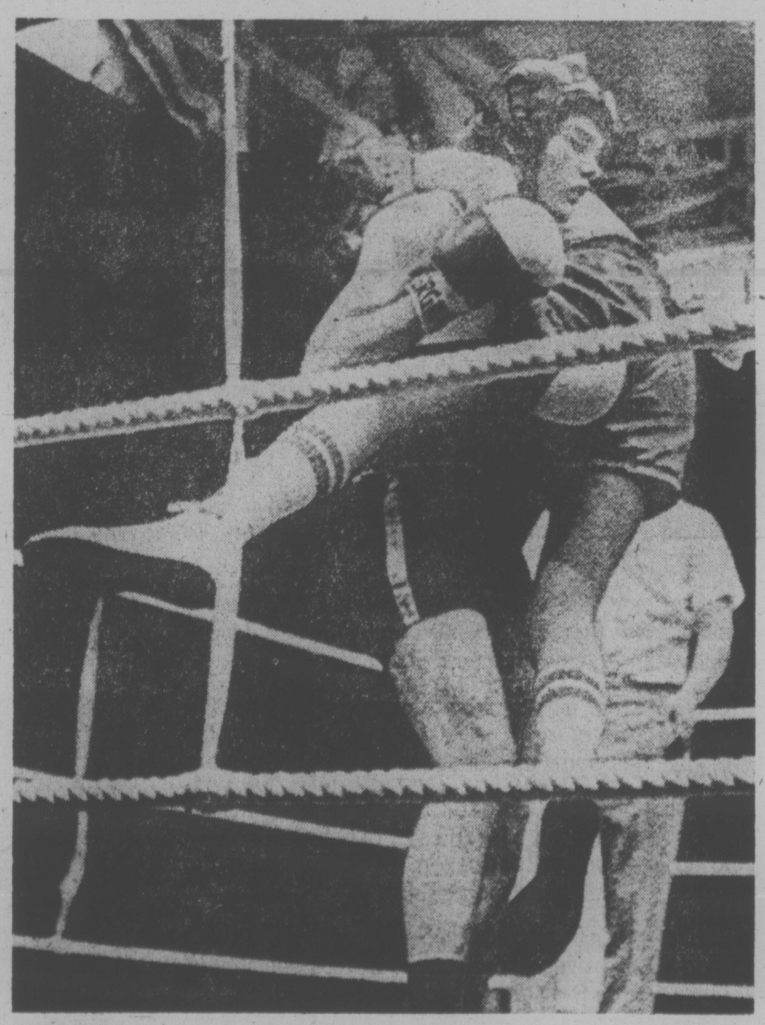
Pete Maravich scored 33 points as the expansion New Orleans team recorded its largest victory margin ever.

Buffalo's Bob McAdoo, the league's top scorer, netted 41 points to pass the 2,000 mark for the season.



WHAT'S UP? Hugh Calfrobe is. The Claresholm, Alta., boxer winds up on the shoulders of British Columbia's Brad Koch during Tuesday boxing bout at Canada Winter Games in Claresholm. Despite the load he had to carry, Koch won the bout. (CP Wirephoto)

Impending Spring Season Turns Mind to Fishing

Although I hesitate to write this, for fear of calling down the wrath of the snow gods, it appears spring may be just around the corner.

And with spring, trout anglers on the coast begin to drag their gear from closets and basements to prepare for that magic moment when our smaller lakes shed their coating of ice. If you happen to hit a lake just after breakup, be ready for some fishing that's out of this world.

Some salmon fishermen, too, who haven't been venturing out during the winter, will be preparing for the days you don't have to huddle next to a heater while trolling the salt-chuck.

Which brings us to the lesson for today.

A lot of good monofilament is probably tossed out every spring when the first cast produces a series of tight coils which entangle into a "bird's-nest."

These super-snarls stem from the plastic memory which is characteristic of this type of line. The tangles may also appear after spooling a new line on a reel, but this problem shouldn't be confused with line twist, which usually is due to a faulty swivel.

Soaking the spool of line in a bucket of water for an hour or two will allow the monofilament to absorb moisture and lose some of the spiral set it takes after being stored for a long time on the reel. Warm water, but not hot, permits faster absorbtion.

Another way to accomplish the same thing is to slowly let the line out behind a moving boat and leave it in the water while running out to your fishing location.

If you have a large yard, try tying the line to an immovable object and back off slowly, keeping the line tight as it comes off the reel until you have let out more than the length of an average cast.

Pull the line tight, then relax it a little and pull tight again. Repeat about a dozen times, applying enough tension to pull out the coils but stopping before the breaking point is reached. This process, according to the people who manufacture these lines in the first place, doesn't affect the line's strength.

The ability of monofilament to recover its original straightness, called bend recovery, is used as a test by some line manufacturers.

A length of line is wound tightly around a tiny bar, barely three thirty-seconds of an inch in diameter, for several minutes. It is then dropped into a tank of water.

Within an hour, the monofilament should recover at least 90 per cent of its original straightness. Some lines don't and the poor recovery makes them difficult to cast or even to control while trolling.

I'm sure every fisherman, sooner or later, regrets picking up a "bargain" line.

Another point to remember is that monofilament normally loses from 10 to 15 per cent of its tensile strength while wet. In some poorly-processed lines, this strength loss can even exceed 25 per cent.

This means that some of the cheaper lines, tested while dry, might not come close to having the actual pound test rating printed on their package.

NIBBLES: Win Rose topped the monthly frostbite derby for Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association on Sunday by catching an 8:06-pound chinook salmon on strip in Coles Bay . . . Win and husband John managed to boat their limit of eight fish that day, all over three pounds . . . Alf Lohr finished second in the derby with an 8:04-pounder taken near Goldstream Island and Mel Lohr was third with a 6:08-pounder landed in the same vicinity.

Another Key Victory

Spectrum continued to make believers out of the other teams in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League by chalking up an 84-72 victory over visiting Reynolds Roadrunners Tuesday.

In other games, Mt. Douglas Rams topped visiting Belmont Braves 62-46, Oak Bay Bays mauled visiting Victoria Totems 71-58 and Esquimalt Dockers defeated visiting Dunsmuir Demons, 63-52.

With only two holdovers from last season when they finished last under the Mount View Hornets banner, Spectrum now has a 5-6 record and occupies third place in Division "B".

Gord Gummer, who has missed double figures only once in 11 games while helping pace the remarkable Spectrum comeback, hit for 26 points Tuesday while clubmate Roy Gerath added 17. Greg McInnis topped Roadrunners with 26 points.

John McManaman hammered in 16 points and hauled down 12 rebounds to lead the Rams, who are now close to wrapping up the Division "A" title.

Larry Dalziel set the pace for Bays, who ran an unbeaten string to 11 games, with 26 points while Charlie Davis topped Totems with 14.

Spectrum May Be Nameless But Don't Call It a Loser

SCHOOL SPORTS
jim crerar

What's in a name, Shakespeare once asked. The answer at Spectrum Community School these days is everything and nothing, depending on your point of view.

It's everything if you consider that Spectrum is a new name for a new school with a new administration, new teachers, a new concept of community involvement and, as a result, new interest on the part of the students. The only thing that isn't new is the building, which is the old Mount View High School.

On the other hand, there's nothing in a name if you consider that Spectrum doesn't have one for its sports teams. A poll last fall produced some 40 suggestions, four of which survived — Family, Rays, Spirit and Storm — but a school-wide vote resulted in a dead heat between Spirit and Storm.

At that point, somebody suggested that not only was a team name unnecessary, it would be a novelty not to have one. A team by any other name would play the same, to paraphrase the creator of Romeo and Juliet, and the idea caught on.

So has boys' basketball at Spectrum.

Last year was a disaster at Mount View, where the Hornets dropped through a trap door and landed with a dull thud in the league cellar, never to emerge. By the end there were more people playing than watching.

It's a whole new ball game this year, though. There's a new coach in Rick Mark, eight new players, a winning attitude and renewed interest by the fans. Following Tuesday's victory over Reynolds Roadrunners, in fact, the Spectrum No-Names were running third with a 5-6 won-lost mark and a 10-15 record including exhibitions.

The new coach is no loser. He plays for Victoria Scorpions, who are one win away from the B.C. Senior "A" championship, and last year he coached Vancouver Killarney to third place in the B.C. high school finals.

In a pre-season poll last fall, Mark picked his team to make the playoffs. The other nine coaches in the league didn't believe him; they all picked Spectrum last.

RICK MARK

JOE GREWAL
. . . a returnee

ROY GERATH
. . . a newcomer

His own players didn't believe him, either, at least at first. They were blown out of the gym in a couple of early games.

"Now they're starting to play their own game," Mark explained. "Instead of looking over their shoulders in awe at Oak Bay warming up, they're starting to believe in themselves. They're starting to feel like a basketball team."

Faith healing has worked. The Spectrum kids have knocked over Reynolds, Parkland Panthers and Claremont Spartans so far and in Mark's estimation played one of their best games a week ago in a 78-70 loss to the tough Vic High Totems.

Guards Joe Grewal and Gord Gummer are Spectrum's only returnees but newcomers Roy Gerath, Paul Sharples, Dan Hood and Julius Karpati are coming into their own. Karpati, however, may be through for the season with a sprained ankle and that's unfortunate because he typifies the new attitude at Spectrum.

A six-foot-two soccer goalie, Big Julie hadn't played high school basketball until this season. He was discouraged at first because he wasn't scoring, but Mark pointed out that there's more to the game than throwing a ball through a hoop. Karpati got the message and developed into a solid playmaker and the team's top rebounder.

"The biggest change at this school," Mark said, "is that the students feel like it's a fresh start. That applies to basketball, too. By the playoffs, I think we'll be ready to play head-to-head with anybody. We may not beat teams that are better than us, but we're not conceding any more."

So they aren't Spectrum's nameless waifs after all; they're just plain Spectrum and they're proving they belong.

CHALK DUST—Steve Pescod of Oak Bay Bays won the high school one-on-one championship run at halftime of UVic Vikings basketball games this season. He beat Vic High's Tony Carlson 21-12 in the final . . . John Kootnekoff made his final home appearance last weekend as coach of Simon Fraser's basketball clan. His 10-year career there spanned more than 280 games . . . Former Victorian Penny May, who rejoined UBC's track team after extensive travel in Africa, placed third in the pentathlon and 60-yard hurdles at a recent indoor meet at the University of Washington . . . There hasn't been a Canada West Conference team in the top 10 national college basketball rankings since the Vikings made 10th place three weeks ago. Latest ratings, in order, are Waterloo Warriors, Manitoba Bisons, St. Mary's Huskies, Acadia Axemen, Windsor Lancers, Concordia Sir George Williams campus, Concordia Loyola campus, Ottawa Gee Gees, Laurentian Voyageurs and Guelph Griffons.

Demons Make Playoffs

Victoria High Tigers romped through an undefeated season and Mt. Douglas Ramblers ran away with "A" division honors but Dunsmuir Demons also scored a notable achievement in the Greater Victoria Inter-High Senior Girls' Basketball League.

Dunsmuir qualified for playoffs in the school's first year in the league.

In other games Tuesday, Vic High won its 12th straight by trouncing Oak Bay 67-24, Mt. Douglas slipped by Belmont Tomahawks 58-54 and Reynolds downed Spectrum 37-17.

Playoffs will get under way Thursday with Dunsmuir going against the powerful Tigers, Mt. Doug meeting Spectrum, the "A"division's second team meeting Oak Bay and the third-place squad facing Reynolds.

Westerners Set To Meet Saints

One of the Greater Victoria entries in the Inter-City Senior "A" Women's Basketball League is slated for an unexpected early elimination in the playoffs.

Saanich Westerners and Victoria Saints will open a best-of-three semi-final series Thursday at 9 p.m. in Reynolds High School.

Westerners were originally scheduled to meet Simon Fraser University in the series but league officials changed the format to save on travelling expenses. League-champion Vancouver Buzz-Bombs will take on SFU in the other series on the Mainland.

Angie Dobie, a member of the B.C. team which won a gold medal Monday in the Canada Winter Games at Lethbridge, will rejoin Westerners for the series.

But the Saints are hurting.

Jill Smith, who injured her knee in the final league game against BuzzBombs, won't be able to play while Bev Hobbis, who recently had a toe operation, and Shirley Marshall, who has job commitments, may also miss Thursday's game.

Extended Layoff For Lafleur

MONTREAL (CP) — It will be at least another three weeks before right winger Guy Lafleur returns to National Hockey League action with Montreal Canadiens.

"I had been planning to be back for the game against California here March 3," Lafleur said Tuesday. "But right now I have got to agree with the doctor. The finger is very swollen and very painful."

Lafleur was slashed across his left hand by Darryl Sittler of Toronto Maple Leafs last Wednesday in Toronto. He suffered a fracture on the base of the left index finger.

"Right now I have the feeling I don't want to come back too soon," added Lafluer, the Canadiens' top scorer with 44 goals and 52 assists.

"I don't want to hurt it again and miss the playoffs. I'm skating every day and staying in shape. I'll be ready when I come back. I'm working hard.

"I hope when I get back they (the Canadiens) will help me get my 50 goals. I'm sure they will."

Cricket Tour Called Off by Australians

SYDNEY (UPI) — The Australian cricket tour of South Africa scheduled for the 1975-76 season has been cancelled, the chairman of the Australian cricket board, Tim Caldwell announced today.

Caldwell said plans for the tour were dropped because the board did not want to go ahead in defiance of the wishes of the government.

The government is opposed to tours of South Africa by Australian teams until teams there are selected on a multi-racial basis.

Racing Seeks Gov't Aid

The provincial government should make more funds available to horsebreeders as an incentive to improve breeding stock, the B.C. Racing Commission says.

The commission's annual report tabled in the legislature Tuesday says the commission, "although very gratified for impressive wagering statistics, remains determined to involve the provincial government in a complete breeder-assistance program."

Racing at Vancouver's Exhibition Park had to be cut by nine days because of a "present lack of good quality racing stock," says commission chairman David W. Gibbons.

Pari-mutuel wagering totalled $66,779,571 during 1974 and gross provincial tax was $5,342,365, "an increase in excess of 15 per cent over the previous year."

Purse money distributed to top horses totalled $3,157,522 for the year and the government made a further grant of $667,795 to owners of B.C. bred horses.

Tight Race Continues In Seniors Curling

CALGARY (CP) — Eight of 13 rounds were completed in the Canadian Senior Men's Curling championship Tuesday and only Newfoundland's luckless Royal Cooper of Gander appeared out of the race.

Cooper lost seven straight games through Tuesday, but the way everybody else has been going, anybody appears capable of winning.

They broke up a six-way traffic jam for first place in the eighth round Tuesday night as each of the Prairie rinks lost its second game of the day. Back on top with 5-2 records were 1971 champion Wendell MacDonald, the 66-year-old Charlottetown physician, and Jim Simpson of Thunder Bay, the president of the Northern Ontario Curling Association.

Each of the leaders drew a bye Tuesday and won their other two starts. MacDonald whipped Cooper 9-4, then made it look just as easy against Alberta in the eighth round, dumping Edmonton's Del McIntyre 9-3. Simpson drubbed Ron McPhee of Kimberley, skipping the entry from defending champion, B.C., 8-2 and then cracked a four-ender in the seventh end which paved the way for a 9-6 win over Lyle Henry of Manitoba.

A majority of the contenders tumbled into second place with 4-3 records. They included Saskatchewan — the victim of the eighth round's most stunning upset — Alberta, Manitoba, New Brunswick and Quebec.

Morrie Thompson of Saskatoon made an open takeout for three in the 10th end and a key 9-5 sixth-round victory over Manitoba. But Thompson was then beaten 8-7 by B.C. which ended a four-game losing streak for McPhee, and by Herb Taylor's Whitehorse, Yukon, rink representing the Territories.

Taylor stole 10 points over the first seven ends against Saskatchewan after Thompson blanked the opener. Then the Saskatchewan skip engineered three points in the eighth and promptly conceded.

Kem Melvin of Saint John, N.C., lost twice Tuesday but still remained in the crowd at 4-3. Glen Adams of Lachine, Que., pulled into contention by shading New Brunswick 6-5 in the eighth round.

The Territories is alone with a 3-3 record while Ontario and Nova Scotia are 3-4 and B.C. 2-4.

JENKINS SIGNS FOR $175,000

Times News Services

Pitcher Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., the 25-game winner of Texas Rangers, passed up an arbitration hearing and signed a one-year contract Tuesday for close to $175,000.

The contract makes Jenkins one of the highest-paid pitchers in baseball history, ahead of the reported $164,000 made by Philadelphia's Steve Carlton. Jim (Catfish) Hunter signed a free-agent contract with New York Yankees for $3.75 million, but the five-year pact was reported to give him a salary of $150,000 a year.

Jenkins' contract provides for an estimated $175,000 for the 1975 season.

LONG WAIT FOR OPEN GRID DATE

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Schedule-makers for major United States college football teams believe in planning ahead.

University of Texas was able to schedule Boston College into its schedule for a game Sept. 11, 1976, but Boston was lucky.

That was the only date the Texans had open until 1990, when today's three-year-olds will be ready to play college football.

Calgarian Top Skier

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Jim Hunter of Calgary clinched the combined title in the Canadian Alpine ski championships at Marmot Basin Tuesday with a victory in the slalom event.

Hunter flashed down the 63- and 61-gate men's courses in 51.34 and 53.63 seconds for a lead of almost 1½ seconds over his nearest rival, Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont. Raymond Pratte of Rouyn, Que., and Gary Aiken of Trail tied for third place.

Kathy Kreiner, 17, of Timmins, Ont., made a clean sweep of the women's combined title by winning the slalom Tuesday with a total time on the two runs of 98.65 seconds. She was followed in the slalom by Susan Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., and her sister, Laurie Kreiner.

ALS SIGN GUARD

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League have signed offensive guard Frank Pomarico, 25, of Notre Dame.

Reed Paces Brentwood

Jeff Reed scored two goals Tuesday to spark Brentwood College to a 3-0 victory over St. Michael's University in an Independent Schools Soccer League match at Brentwood.

Derek Sharpe counted Brentwood's other goal.

CFL Will Consider Dozen Rule Changes

TORONTO (CP) — Steve Scully, a six-foot-three Kitchener, Ont., native who has been a starting tackle with Syracuse University over the last two seasons, has been tabbed as the No. 1 choice by Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Canadian Football League's draft of college players.

The Bombers won the right at first pick by acquiring Calgary Stampeders' choice. The Stampeders earned first choice by finishing last in the Western Football Conference in 1974.

The CFL also has issued a list of 12 possible rule changes that will be voted on by league's executive, probably Thursday, during the four-day meeting expected to end Friday.

The new rules are the result of a CFL meeting held in Washington Jan. 7, 1975. The executive committee will either accept or reject the changes. No debate will be permitted.

They are:

1. Blocking above the waist be permitted outside the scrimmage zone on punt returns. The five-yard restraining zone shall be retained. The punter cannot be contacted until he has crossed the scrimmage line.

2. Converts will be retained but any team may pick up two points by either passing or rushing the ball into the end zone.

3. After a field goal, the kicking team may be required to kick off from its own 35-yard line.

4. After a single point, the team scored against shall take possession of the ball on its own 35-yard line rather than the 25-yard line.

5. First down to be awarded to offensive team, in addition to any yardage assessed the defensive team for rough play or unnecessary roughness.

6. Contacting the kicker rule to be amended to include that if the kicker makes any movement to pass the ball from the normal punting position he will be considered a ball carrier.

7. If defending team intercepts in its own end zone, and the passing team is assessed a penalty for rough play or unnecessary roughness, the penalty shall be applied from the intercepting team's 10-yard line.

8. When a ball carrier is grounded and in the judgment of the official has no intention of trying to advance, the play shall be declared dead.

9. When the ball changes hands in the last three minutes of either half, time shall not start until the snap of the ball on the next play.

10. Ball shall be declared dead, even if it is in bounds, if it touches a player who is out of bounds. Ball shall belong to the last team touching it before hitting the out-of-bound player.

11. Field goal is good regardless of whether it is touched by a player of either team before it crosses the scrimmage line, or is touched by a defending player after it crosses the scrimmage line, providing it goes between the goal posts.

12. Corner post marking goallines, sidelines and deadlines, shall be so placed that they be considered out of bounds.

The 1975 game is scheduled for Nov. 23 — the earliest championship in 60 years — at Calgary.

Both Toronto and Montreal have made pitches for the 1976 game. Toronto is considered the favorite since the completion date for the Montreal 70,000-plus Olympic Stadium is a question mark.

But Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau has sent a letter to CFL saying the stadium will be completed in time for the 1976 Grey Cup.

O.J. Top Athlete

ROTONDA, Fla. (AP) — O. J. Simpson won the 100-yard dash in 9.69 seconds Tuesday and was crowned the new Superstars champion.

Defending champion Kyle Rote Jr., of the North American Soccer League's Dallas Tornado, was third with 31 points. He was followed by Franco Harris 27, Lawrence McCutcheon 20, Ard Schenk 18, Steve Smith 14, Phil Villapiano 13½, Hugo Nindl 12, Marty Riessen 9, Lou Brock 4, John Haylicek 2 and Jack Ham and Mike Hargrove at a point each.

Simpson, running star of the National Football League's Buffalo Bills, wasn't among the leaders in last year's Superstars. But he earned $25,000 first place money this time. With $300 for each point, he made another $14,250 for a total of $39,250. He had pocketed $14,800 in winning his qualifying round into the finals.

WFL MAY TRY TORONTO AGAIN

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Chris Hemmeter, president of the World Football League, indicated Tuesday there will be another attempt to place a franchise in Toronto with Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield as the nucleus.

The three former Miami Dolphin stars signed a personal services contract last year with John F. Bassett of Toronto, owner of Memphis Southmen of the WFL.

"There is a possibility that we will return to Toronto," Bassett said by telephone Tuesday from Las Vegas, Nev., where he was attending a World Hockey Association meeting. "But New York is a possibility and so is Memphis."

Hemmeter said earlier in the day at a news conference in Charlotte that the league "will build a new franchise around the three," meaning Csonka, Kiick and Warfield. He said the franchise would be in a city that wasn't in the league last season.

The major stumbling block to a Toronto WFL franchise is federal government pressure which forced Bassett to take his Toronto Northmen to Memphis as the Southmen in the WFL's inaugural season.

A bill was introduced in Parliament to forbid a Canadian franchise in the WFL, but Bassett moved the team before the bill was enacted.

Csonka, Kiick and Warfield met with Hammetter and Bassett in Toronto last week-Bassett in Toronto last weekend and were brought up to date on the WFL reorganization plans.

Bassett indicated last season that he didn't like spending so much time in Memphis away from his hometown and business interests.

McKechnie Traded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League have traded Walt McKechnie to Detroit Red Wings for two rookie forwards, it was learned Tuesday.

Bruins coach Don Cherry said it was unfortunate that news of the trade got out just before a game. Official announcement of the trade was expected during Tuesday night's game between Vancouver Canucks and the visiting Bruins.

Love Match Still Going

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert appeared together at the $30,000 Independent Players Association tennis tournament Tuesday and ended speculation that their romance was over.

"We still care about each other," said Miss Evert, 20. "Anybody who didn't think we still cared about each other after we broke off our engagement was kidding themselves."

Connors, the top-seeded player in the tournament, said he is staying with Chris and her parents at their Fort Lauderdale house this week and indicated that marriage still was on the couple's minds.

CBC Treatment 'Not So Cruel'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer said Tuesday in British Columbia supreme court that the CBC was "not so heartless and cruel" as to compel its reporter in Victoria to work for both television and radio against his wishes.

The description by George Murray, however, differed from the way Arch Snow, the CBC reporter in question, described the situation.

The difference arose during a libel action brought by Robert McGall, pacific regional director for the CBC, against Sun columnist Lisa Hobbs, Sun publisher Stuart Keate, the Vancouver Sun and Pacific Press Ltd. for columns published Nov. 4 and 10, 1973.

A counter-suit has been filed by Hobbs for a letter to the editor signed by McGall and published Nov. 9, 1973.

Murray, representing McGall, said Snow was able to drop radio work after his illness in the fall of 1973 and concentrate on legislative reporting.

Snow testified, however, that he received no positive acknowledgement of the change, saying "I just ignored the (radio) job."

Snow said a letter sent to the CBC in Vancouver Sept. 10, 1973, requesting assistance because overwork was damaging his health might have motivated some pity. However, he said he thought his illness, rather than the letter, prompted the CBC to send a radio reporter to Victoria.

The action and defence revolves around the standard of legislature coverage by the CBC during Snow's illness when he was replaced by Henry Bessier, who also worked for Broadcast News Ltd., the radio arm of the Canadian Press.

Pressed by Murray to give a judgment on Bessier's ability as a political reporter, Snow replied: "Some of the questions he's asked (politicians) have been rather stupid."

Snow said a political reporter should have experience and political acumen.

"You ask me to judge Henry . . . I really can't . . . I'm too nice a guy to say nasty things. That's what got me in the trouble I'm in today."

Snow denied he was biased against the CBC, despite a legal battle and an arbitration appeal he has launched against being transferred to Vancouver after covering the legislature in Victoria for 10 years.

He told the jury that in addition to being expected to report for CBC radio and television, he also had to cover Victoria city and Lower Vancouver Island.

Snow said he wrote a letter on Sept. 10, 1973, to Jim Ball of CBC Radio in Vancouver, saying he was overworked and that overwork was threatening his health and asked for assistance in radio coverage.

He said that on Sept 10, he had some tests taken in hospital. He covered the opening of the legislature on Sept. 13, and the next day he was taken ill with hypertension.

Snow said he had been asked by Bessier in the summer of 1973 if he (Bessier) "could fill in while I was away on holiday" because Bessier wanted some television experience.

Snow said he told the CBC and later instructed Bessier "roughly what the job entailed" during the August holiday period. He said legislature work in August is light.

Snow said he thought he recommended that Bessier fill in during the August vacation.

"So there's nothing unusual in September when you became ill for Bessier to take your place," asked Murray.

"I think the feeling in the CBC is anybody could fill in," said Snow. "Henry happened to be around so he was used."

The case continues.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate foreign relations committee recommended Tuesday that the Senate confirm Elliot Richardson to be United States ambassador to Britain.

St. Pierre Wins Half Its Demands

PARIS (AP) — France agreed Tuesday to pull out half the special police contingent it sent to keep things quiet on the islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon.

The islands, with a population 5,840 and French since 1536, bubbled up in anger last month over what its people considered to be France's lack of concern about the 93 square miles south of Newfoundland.

On Jan. 26, the island's governing council walked out, accusing the Paris-appointed governor, Jean Cluchard, of not respecting directives on salary talks involving civil servants. In a climate of strikes and demonstrations, Cluchard called in 60 special policemen from the French Caribbean island of Martinique.

Federal Labor Shortage Warned

OTTAWA (CP) — A confidential report prepared by the federal pay research bureau says the public service will have to deal with labor shortages in the next decade unless it pays its blue-collar employees wages comparable with those in other sectors.

The report, especially dealing with the 18,600 members of the general labor and trades group, who now are on strike across the country, says the government has difficulty in competing for skilled tradesmen because of lower pay rates.

In recent contract talks wages have emerged as the main issue, with the Public Service Alliance asking for increases that would bring pay of the group to within 90 per cent of similar rates in the private sector.

The treasury board has argued that public servants have better fringe benefits and pensions and are assured of continuing employment while tradesmen in the private sector are subject to layoffs.

Average hourly wages of the group now are $4.42, with the range between a low of $3.38 for airport runway maintenance workers and a high of $6.31 for aircraft mechanics.

The report says the government has had trouble recruiting skilled tradesmen who are in short supply because of the generally lower federal pay.

More than 50 per cent of the labor and trades group is aged 45 or more and over the next decade the government will face a rapid turnover in workers.

Many of the employees joined the public service after the war and will retire in the next 10 years. This could accentuate the general shortage felt by the government, the report says.

The study compares the federal government's recruitment with that of the construction and manufacturing industries, municipal and provincial governments.

Because of troubles in competing with other sectors, federal government managers have resorted to a number of practices that do not follow guides set out by the Public Service Commission, the report says.

In some cases jobs have been overclassified or reclassified by managers so that higher wages can be obtained to compete with other sectors, the report says.

Higher wages than those set out in collective agreements have been paid in other instances and job requirements have been given the "widest possible interpretation" to gain better pay for prospective recruits.

Administrative delays led to loss of potential employees to other sectors and a survey of federal regional offices showed 90 per cent had trouble in recruiting compared with 65 per cent of construction firms and 42 per cent of municipalities.

Meanwhile with the growing incidence of illegal strikes in the federal public service, government officials are searching for an effective method to resolve the problem.

The issue is especially topical as the current strike of the PSA general labor and trades group includes airport runway cleaners. Until now, most of the airport maintenance men have remained at work.

About half the runway cleaners are designated as essential to public safety and security and forbidden to strike. But that does no eliminate the threat of walkouts by those employees nor has it in the past.

'Reformers' Costs Bog Down $1.5B Toronto Project

TORONTO (UPI) — The world's tallest self-supporting building is soaring toward completion in downtown Toronto — but the rest of the grandiose plan may never be built.

The $1.5 billion project has bogged down in bitterness amid protests from anti-development "reformers" and conflicts over construction costs.

The 200-acre Metro Centre complex, fronting Lake Ontario, was originally planned seven years ago as the largest downtown redevelopment program in North America, possibly in the world.

It was to comprise four major elements — an integrated transportation centre, a communications and broadcasting complex, a fashionable commercial area of shops and offices and, finally, a residential section with homes for 22,000 in a green-belt setting.

Work began on a communications and observation tower two years ago. Now the CN Tower, owned by the Canadian National Railroad, reaches up 1,480 feet to dominate the waterfront. Next month a giant work helicopter owned by a Los Angeles company is expected to begin 44 flights to carry a 335-foot needle-shaped television transmission mast into position atop the tower.

The building will then rise to 1,815 feet compared to 1,472 feet for the Empire State Building and 1,727 feet for the World Trade Centre, both in New York City.

But while work on the tower has proceeded smoothly, problems have snarled the rest of the project.

Complex negotiations involved three levels of government — federal, provincial and municipal — and two major railroad companies. The issue embraced crucial questions about transportation needs and city development for the year 2000 and beyond.

Consultants produced masses of reports, maps and graphs. Opponents raised shrill cries of protest. The economic climate went sour, agreement remained elusive.

Now another task force has been set up with orders to produce a report by March 31.

"The moment of truth is with us," says Stewart Andrews, president of Metro Centre Developments Ltd. "Either the city wants the project or it doesn't.

"If the plan falls through, I think those responsible would be guilty of failing in their responsibilities to future generations. It would be a very improper decision in every way, shape and form."

Andrews blamed anti-development forces for "distorting and misrepresenting" the project so that the public — and even some members of city council — have become confused and uncertain about it.

"In fact, it is probably the most exciting development concept in the world," he said. "There is nothing in the area now but a lot of nondescript buildings and acres of railroad lines," he said.

BRIDGETOWN — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip arrived in Barbados by air Tuesday night following a two-day visit to Bermuda. A highlight of the visit here will be the knighting by the Queen of cricket star Garfield Sobers who was named in the New Year's honor list.

WASHINGTON — Rep. Wilbur Mills is back in Bethesda Naval Hospital and his wife, Polly, is in a private Washington hospital for a physical examination and minor surgery.

LONDON, Ont. — Donald Cline, 21, accused of kidnapping four children last month in their house near Thamesford, Ont., was charged Tuesday with extortion. Cline is accused of inducing provincial authorities to give him $10,000, a radio-equipped police car and free passage in exchange for the children's lives.

HACKENSACK, N.J. — Louis Davenport decided to get an annulment when he found out his bride of two weeks had once been a man. Judge Sherwin Lester ruled the wife, Brenda Adams, 24, had committed fraud and granted the annulment to Davenport, 54.

LONDON — British women record another first Friday when the Bank of England issues a new note featuring Florence Nightingale. A portrait of the woman who reformed British nursing methods 120 years ago appears on the back of the ten-pound note. She is the first woman other than a reigning monarch to be on a bank of England note.

Red Light Beat: Key To Vault

HONG KONG — A former police officer, admittedly on the take for 18 years, said his top post in Hong Kong's red light district was "like being allowed free run of the vaults of the Bank of England."

Ernest Hunt, a 21-year Hong Kong police veteran, testified he gave former chief superintendent Peter Godber a bribe to gain a top post in the sleazy Wanchai district.

Hunt was testifying in the second day of the bribery and conspiracy trial of Godber, who faces a maximum 12-year jail term on charges of accepting $25,000 in bribes to get police promotions.

Hunt, who himself served eight months in jail last year for corruption, also said he saw Godber pocket a 1-inch-thick wad of $500 Hong Kong bills from another officer seeking a transfer and automatic promotion.

Martha Wasn't Fibbing

WASHINGTON — John Mitchell "basically" kidnapped his wife Martha to keep her ignorant of Watergate, convicted Watergate conspirator James McCord said Tuesday.

McCord said Mrs. Mitchell had not lied when she claimed she was manhandled and drugged to keep her from learning the truth about the Watergate break-in.

As for the former attorney-general, McCord said, "I think he was fond of her to a degree. But I don't think the man ever levelled with her.

"I think that Martha was ignorant of most of his activities. Shocked is probably more proper. John Mitchell didn't want her to know."

And, McCord said, H. R. Haldeman and other top aides of former president Richard Nixon were jealous of Mrs. Mitchell's popularity and wanted to do whatever they could to embarrass her.

Venezuela Banks Oil $

CARACAS — What would you do if you had $3 billion more than you could use right away. Put it in the bank?

That is what Venezuela has done — for the time being only — with her 3 billion petrodollars, the revenues from oil that cannot be brought home immediately because there is nothing immediately productive for them to be invested in and they would only drive the cost of living here up out of sight.

Like Saudi Arabia, Iran, Kuwait, Iraq, Libya and Nigeria, all oil-exporting countries with even more profits to spare this year, Venezuela has elected to keep a portion of her oil earnings in foreign bank accounts. The government is absorbing $7 billion at home in a record budget that is two thirds investment.

But, unlike the Middle Eastern countries, Venezuela already has the beginnings of heavy industry, an ambitious development plan and fertile farmlands. Next year the Venezuelan Investment Fund, created to care for the country's petrodollars, plans to begin moving money around to serve development and political aims and to buy industrial equipment and machinery abroad in amounts that will add up to $12 billion over the next four years.

By 1978, according to Carlos O. Rangel, the 50-year-old insurance executive who became president of the fund after its creation last June, Venezuela will be able to absorb all its oil revenues and the interest being earned on deposits and loans abroad.

Until then, by law half of each year's oil earnings will stay out of the country in interest-bearing deposits. Hedged against inflation, this money can legally be drawn on only to finance Venezuelan industrial development and, to a much lesser extent, to support the Venezuelan government's nascent foreign aid program in Latin America.

All but one sixth of Venezuela's petrodollars, or a total of $2.5 billion, are now invested abroad, earning average interest of 11.26 per cent. The U.S. has taken in about 85 per cent of the total, according to Rangel, in bank deposits, commercial bonds and government treasury notes. The balance is being held in Western Europe and Japan.

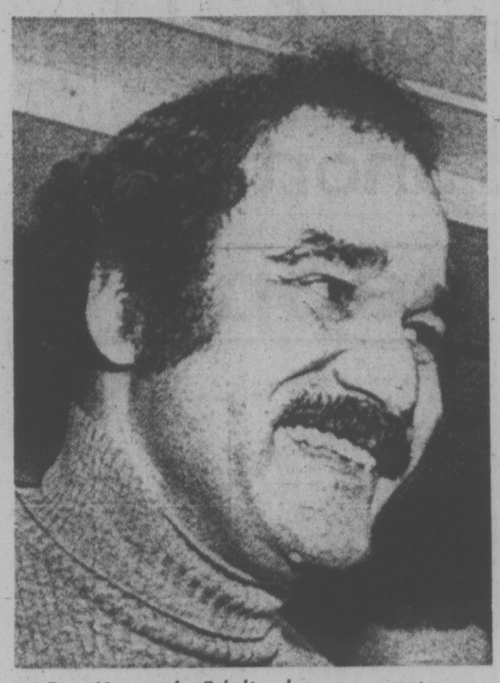
One sixth of this year's fund assets have been committed to foreign aid, in the form of a $500 million loan to the World Bank with no Venezuelan strings attached.

More will go out next year. The fund has completed negotiations for a $500 million loan to the Inter-American Development Bank, committed itself to buying $60 million in bonds, is considering loans of $45 million to the Andean Development Corporation, the loan agency of the Andean pact of which Venezuela is a member, and of between $20 and $25 million to the Caribbean development bank, Rangel reported in a recent interview.

But the aid bonanza some poor Latin American countries had expected from the fund has not materialized.

By its legal charter, the Venezuelan Investment Fund is prohibited from dealing with governments, so the kind of direct budget assistance the U.S. used to grant to Latin countries is ruled out. The fund has committed itself to financing oil imports from Venezuela for six Central American countries and to backing a plan to stockpile Central American coffee beans to drive the price up to consuming nations.

But none of the projects to presidents of Panama and taling $1.6 billion that the other Central American countries hopefully brought to a recent summit meeting with Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez was approved. Policy guidelines prohibit the fund from investing in roads, schools, hospitals or, in fact, anything but profit-making enterprises that can eventually pay interest.



Dr. Kenneth Edelin leaves courtroom

Doctor to Appeal Abortion Sentence

BOSTON (WP) — Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin was sentenced in Boston Tuesday to one year's probation after being convicted of manslaughter in the death of a fetus after performing a legal abortion.

Despite the light sentence, which he called "extremely fair," Edelin vowed to appeal his conviction.

Suffolk County Superior Court Judge James P. McGuire stayed the sentence, which could have been 20 years in prison pending an appeal. A notice of appeal was filed Tuesday afternoon.

At the same time, the trustees of Boston City Hospital, where Edelin performed the abortion on an 18-year-old woman 20 to 24 weeks pregnant on Oct. 3, gave the 36-year-old obstetrician a vote of confidence and invited him back to work.

In "a statement of support and outrage," the hospital trustees called Edelin "an outstanding physician whose professional performance has been and continues to be at the highest level.

His actions and medical practice have been consistent with the highest prevailing standards of medical care, and we strongly reaffirm his continuing staff appointment."

Edelin, in an interview before he was sentenced, said, "the thing I want to do most is kind of fade away into obscurity and practice medicine."

Vegetables Mellow Flavor Of Wiener Pie

Wiener Snack Pie is an especially good choice for entertaining because it can be made ahead and heated just before serving. Guests of all ages will like the cheesy, good flavor that mellows the crisp vegetables, bacon and macaroni. Underneath is a crispy layer of corn chips. The wieners make an interesting pattern in addition to adding high quality protein.

WIENER SNACK PIE

1 pound wieners
7-oz. pkg. elbow macaroni (4 cups cooked)
6 slices bacon, chopped
½ cup sliced radishes
¼ cup sliced green onions
¼ cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon flour
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
2 cups shredded cheddar cheese
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Corn chips

Make diagonal slits in the wieners. Cook macaroni as directed on package. Fry bacon until crisp. Drain, leaving 1 tablespoon drippings in pan. Lightly fry vegetables. Combine milk, flour and seasonings and add. Stir over low heat until it comes to a boil. Add half the cheese and the mustard. Heat until the cheese melts. Combine with the macaroni and bacon. Spread chips on bottom of 12 inch round baking pan. Spoon macaroni over chips. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Arrange wieners on top. Heat at 400 degrees F. about 12 minutes. Cut in wedges to serve.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: HONEY CUSTARD

By BABE WARREN

(Today's reader recipe was submitted by Babe Warren, 334 Walton. If you have a family or favorite recipe you would gladly share, please send it to the Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

Honey can be used in most recipes which call for sugar simply by substituting half as much honey as sugar.

I frequently make lemonade, for example, by cutting one whole lemon in four slices, mixing it with ½ pint of water in a blender to the count of ten, straining the mixture then diluting concentrate to taste. Makes about ½ gallon.

HONEY CUSTARD

4 slightly beaten eggs
1-3 cup liquid honey
¼ tspn. salt
2 cups milk
½ tspn. vanilla

Combine eggs, honey, salt in blender, if available. Slowly stir in milk and vanilla. Pour into six buttered custard cups. Place cups in a pan of hot water and bake at 325 degrees for about 50 minutes or until mixture doesn't adhere to a knife.

Serve chilled or warm topped with a drizzle of honey.

Swiss Cheese Industry Full of Holes

Victoria Times
THIRD SECTION
FOOD and nutrition

BERN, Switzerland (WP) — "Hard Times for Hard Cheese," said the headline over a recent newspaper article that surveyed the condition of the Swiss cheese industry and found it full of holes.

Swiss cheese is so expensive, the article complained, that it is losing an ever larger share of foreign markets to cheaply priced imitations from other countries. Even in Switzerland, more and more people are putting imported cheese rather than the home-made variety on their dinner tables.

That would seem to be a serious matter for a country that is often described as having "a population of 6 million people and 900,000 cows." For generations, most of the milk from these cows has gone into the production of the hole-pocked, pale yellow cheese officially called Emmentaler but known everywhere simply as Swiss.

Yet, while cheese is Switzerland's most famous product, it now stands well down on the list of exports that make this little nation one of Europe's foremost islands of prosperity. As Willy Buehlmann, chief of the export division of the Swiss Cheese Union, points out:

"Once we were a poor bucolic country with only two things to export: Swiss cheese and Swiss people. Then came the development of our high-technology industries, and our export trade now is centred around them. Even though cheese is still our most important agricultural export, it accounts for only about five per cent of our export sales."

That's not to imply that cheese doesn't still occupy a very important place in the Swiss scheme of things. Although agriculture now accounts for only seven per cent of national production, the Swiss consider it of crucial importance to preserve the agricultural sector of their economy.

This is because of Switzerland's policy of political neutrality and its experiences during two world wars. All long-range planning gives a high priority to the idea that Switzerland, in the event of future emergencies that might see a shrinking of outside food supplies, should be in a position to feed itself for a sustained period of time.

The backbone of the agricultural sector is dairying, and to keep the country's 100,000 dairy farmers in business, the Swiss government has evolved a complex structure of milk price supports designed to ensure the farmers an income roughly equivalent to those earned by skilled workers in industry.

Inevitably, this means that a lot of milk is produced in Switzerland, and the bulk of it goes into cheese. The Swiss make several kinds, including processed or factory-manufactured cheese, and a variety of soft and semi-hard cheeses that are largely for home consumption and almost unknown abroad.

But the core of the industry is hard cheese, of which there are four principal varieties: the world-famous Emmentaler, the Gruyere beloved of fondue fanciers and the lesser-known Sbrinz and Appenzeller. Unlike processed cheese, these are made in some 1,600 small village cheese dairies by centuries-old methods that use only cow-fresh milk without any chemicals or other additives.

The result is a product of extremely high purity and quality. But the old-fashioned methods are very costly in comparison to factory mass production. And, when these high production costs are added to the high price of milk dictated by the support system, Swiss hard cheese emerges, as Buehlmann concedes, as "the most expensive table cheese in the world."

Pink, White Grapefruit: A Toss-Up

NUTRITION BUYLINE

Q: Is pink grapefruit a better buy than white?

A. Pink grapefruit has no more nutritional value than white but sometimes it costs more. Regardless of skin color, choose citrus fruits with thin skins when buying by weight as you receive proportionately more flesh and juice than with a thick skinned item.

Q: A TV commercial stated that french fried potatoes are a good source of Vitamin C. Since potatoes are cheaper than citrus fruit juices could I use potatoes to provide my family with their daily Vitamin C requirement?

A: As compared to citrus fruits and their juices, which have an excellent Vitamin C content of 100 to 124 mg-cup, potatoes have only 12 to 22 mg-cup. Also, some of the vitamin content of the potatoes is lost during storage, preparation and cooking. With these unknown losses and the low initial Vitamin C content of potatoes there is no way of knowing the remaining vitamin content in the french fries you may buy. Considering food value for money spent you should continue serving citrus fruit juices as your family's main Vitamin C food source.

Q: In my supermarket ice milk which is usually cheapest is sold as well as ice-cream. Is it worthwhile buying?

A: Unlike ice-cream which is made with cream having a 10 per cent fat content ,ice-milk is made with whole milk and milk solids only. Although this combination actually increases the calories and decreases the Vitamin D content of ice-milk, the fat content is noticeably lower — a fact important to anyone wishing to decrease his fat intake. The protein and B and C Vitamin content is slightly increased and the calcium content is much greater than in ice-cream. Ice milk is a practical buy.

Q: How can I decrease the fat content of my family's meals without altering our eating habits or food budget too much?

A: Try these simple suggestions: Choose lean cuts of meat, trim away all visible fat and discard fat that cooks out of meat. Plan more meals around poultry, fish and veal which are all lower in fat. Remove skin from poultry because it contains most of the the fat. Avoid deep fat frying; use cooking methods that help to remove fat — baking, broiling, roasting and stewing. Cook meat, poultry and fish without added fat, for example, by broiling.

Q: How much money can I save by using skim milk powder instead of fresh milk

A: About 50 per cent of the cost of whole milk can be saved if skim milk powder (Vitamin A and D enriched) is used. If the skim milk is mixed with whole or 2 per cent milk to your family's taste, you still save about 25 per cent of the whole milk cost.

Q: I have noticed that some foods I buy are labelled "enriched" or "fortified" and other brands of the same food are not. Which should I buy?

A: "Enriched" foods are those to which certain nutrients have been added to make up for the same nutrients lost during processing (for example, niacin, thiamine, riboflavin and iron are added to flour). "Fortified" is a more general term and means vitamins and minerals have been added to a food (for instance, iodine added to table salt). These nutrients may or may not have been present in the unprocessed food.

APPLESAUCE, HOT OR COLD

More and more of Canada's apple crop is made into convenient apple products. In fact about one third of the crop is processed and the most popular and widely accepted product is applesauce.

Applesauce is usually made from those apples which do not meet the color requirements of fresh apples. Varieties of apples used vary between manufacturers. Applesauce is sold both sweetened and unsweetened and is available in two grades — Canada Fancy, and Canada Choice.

Commercially prepared applesauce is not seasoned because individual tastes vary. Experimenting with many flavor combinations is left up to you. Serve it hot or cold and why not add einnamon, nutmeg, or ginger, raisins, nuts or cut-up fruit? Serve it on toast, waffles or pancakes for breakfast; on muffins for tea break or with gingerbread or ice cream for the evening meal dessert. Applesauce is the perfect accompaniment for chicken, pork or ham.

Baby Clam Pie

(Serves 6)

(Can be made ahead and reheated.)

2 (5.2 oz.) cans baby clams,
½ cup chopped bacon,
½ cup chopped onion,
¼ cup flour,
½ pint (10 oz.) commercial sour cream or plain yogurt,
1 tsp. salt,
⅛ tsp. pepper,
¼ tsp. oregano,
2 beaten eggs,
Pastry for 1 crust pie.

Roll pastry to line 9" pie plate. Drain clams and save ¾ cup liquor. Fry bacon crisp and drain off half fat. Add chopped onion and cook until transparent, then blend in flour and seasonings. Stir in liquor and cook until thick. Add clams and cool mixture slightly. Add beaten eggs and sour cream or yogurt and blend in well. Pour into pastry-lined pie plate, sprinkle with paprika and decorate top with slices of cherry tomato. Bake in 350 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes.

Bring Out the Frozen Berries

By HILDA BEASTALL

It takes a few flakes of snow on the ground to send us looking for a forgotten carton or two of frozen berries from last summer's garden. If we are lucky, we come up with raspberries, logans or blacks, needing only to be thawed for serving over a bowl of homemade yogurt.

Or we may find a carton or two of frozen blueberries bought last year when plentiful. Truly delicious, inexpensive and nutritious desserts are made from any of these if we use a little time and a little thought.

The very simplest is the above idea of the fruit with yogurt, for no sugar is needed when the fruits are used raw. Only when cooked do they lose some of their natural sugars, leaving them somewhat bitter unless we find a way around this.

A Fruit Soup made from frozen berries resembles the Scandinavian winter desserts called Frugt Suppe, from dried fruits. It takes only a few minutes, loses very little natural sweetness, and is truly delicious.

Angelica leaves are beginning to grow again in the garden. Dried leaf is just as effective but you need more. Angelica is not a sweetener, it removes the sourness of fruits which develops when being cooked, or even heated.

FRUIT SOUP

2 cups (about) frozen berries
1 Tbsp dried angelica leaf OR
1 tsp chopped fresh angelica leaf
1 slice fresh lemon
1 tsp demerara sugar
1 tbsp soy flour

Heat the frozen berries in a saucepan with the angelica, lemon and sugar. When melted and berries are softened, press all this through a fine strainer to remove the seeds. This makes the soup suitable for young children and anyone not requiring the roughage of seeds.

Mash the pulp through with a wooden spoon so that only the seeds and lemon skin remain.

Return the pulp to the saucepan; reheat, and thicken with the soy flour mixed with a little cold water. Boil gently for 2 minutes, stirring to keep smooth. It will be only slightly thickened.

Served warm over cubed wholewheat bread, or halved small wholewheat buns, you have a nutritious tasty dessert at low cost in time and ingredients.

A more elaborate fruit dessert, suitable for use with a Sunday vegetable omelet supper is Berry Upside Down Cake.

This can be made with any frozen or thawed berries on hand. If not quite enough, make up the quantity with chopped apple. Again we use angelica leaves for reducing the sourness of the fruit when cooked. It you are not able to get this, you may need to double the sugar unfortunately, which spoils the fruit flavor. But retain the lemon as it too reduces the need for sugar.

BERRY UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

¾ cup unbleached flour
¼ cup wholewheat flour
¼ cup soy flour
1½ tsp baking powder
½ tsp salt
4 Tbsp soft margarine
2 Tbsp demerara sugar—
1 egg
½ cup milk from powdered skim
1 Tbsp soft margarine
2 Tbsp demerara sugar
2 cups frozen or thawed blueberries or other berries
½ lemon, juice and pulp
1 Tbsp dried angelica leaf OR
1 tsp fresh angelica leaf

In a 10 by 6, or 8 by 8-inch glass dish (or similar sized shallow bake dish), put the one tablespoon margarine, 2 tablespoons sugar, angelica (finely cut) and half the frozen or thawed berries. Heat gently to melt. Then sprinkle with the lemon.

Cream the 4 tablespoons margarine with sugar. Beat egg and milk together.

Mix the measured flours, baking powder and salt; add to the creamed mixture alternately with the egg-milk mixture.

When the berry, margarine mixture is dissolved, crush remainng berries with a spoon and add those to the baking dish.

Bake at 163 deg. C. (325 F.) for about 45 minutes or until a clean knife comes out clean.

Let cake cool for 10 minutes; invert a flat plate or dish (suitable shape) over the cake, turn upside down so that fruit and syrup drop over cake and soak in. Leave for another 10 minutes before removing the bake dish.

Serve warm. Doesn't need anything extra to make it better than it already is.

A crumble topping for those who like it crisp goes like this — you can vary the grains as you please.

CRISP TOPPING FOR FRUIT

1 cup oat flakes
½ cup wholewheat flour
½ cup unbleached flour
2 tbsp. demerara sugar
½ cup wheat germ
¼ cup chopped nuts
½ tsp salt
½ cup soft margarine

Combine ingredients, adding margarine at last. Sprinkle over the prepared berries or other fruit, and bake with as cover for 20 minutes in an oven at 177 degs. C. (350 F.). Then remove cover for another 10 minutes baking to crisp the surface.

Some of us have a tendency to hoard the good produce from a previous season until one day we find it unusable. Don't be one of these: now is the time to enjoy last summer's frozen fruits.

Take Advantage Of Specials On Ground Beef

Due to an increase in the marketings of lower grades of beef, there will be ample supplies of ground beef this month. Look for the "specials" and take advantage of them. According to Food and Drug regulations, ground beef must not contain more than 30 per cent fat. If labelled "lean" the maximum fat content is 15 per cent.

POTATO BEEF CASSEROLE

½ cup chopped onion
½ cup diced celery
1 clove garlic crushed
2 tablespoons fat
1 pound minced beef
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 10-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
2 cups hot mashed potatoes, without margarine or liquid (about 4 medium)
1 tablespoon margarine
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon melted margarine

Saute onion, celery and garlic in fat until onion is transparent. Add beef and brown. Drain off excess fat. Add seasonings and soup. Turn into greased baking dish. Combine potatoes and 1 tablespoon margarine and season with salt and pepper. Spread potatoes over meat mixture and brush with melted margarine. Bake 30 minutes at 375 degrees F. 6 servings.

Armstrong Solarian. The sunny floor that shines without waxing.

When your kid decides he's Canada's answer to Mario Andretti, your new floor had better be tough enough to take it.

New Era, an exclusive Floor Fashion Center product, is made with small Mario Andretti's in mind. Because it's the toughest embossed vinyl floor Armstrong makes.

So, whatever kind of punishment your family is ready to dish out, New Era is ready to take it. And more.

It comes in 4 elegant patterns (this one is called Swirl Mosaic), and some 20 beautiful colours, too. So New Era looks as good as it behaves.

Come and see New Era at our Floor Fashion Center.

They really know their stuff. And that's important to you. Because choosing just the right floor for your home is not exactly the easiest of decisions to make.

Especially when you're faced with the finest selection of Armstrong floors in town. (We have over 200 designs and colours to choose from.)

We'll help you with your decorating ideas, too, with an ingenious unit called a colour coordinator. You'll find it's a great way to see just what goes with what.

There's even a place where you can sit and think things over, if you're having trouble making up your mind.

And we don't simply promise professional installation. We guarantee it. In writing.

Spiced Applesauce Cupcakes

⅔ cup sugar.
1 beaten egg.
1¾ cup sifted all-purpose flour.
1 teaspoon baking soda.
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg.
⅛ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon salt.
1 10-ounce can applesauce
½ cup raisins.
½ cup chopped nuts (optional)
¼ cup sifted icing sugar.
1 tablespoon applesauce.

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg; beat until fluffy. Sift dry ingredients. Add alternately with applesauce to butter mixture, reserving 1 tablespoon applesauce for glaze. Fold in raisins and nuts. Fill greased muffin tins two-thirds full. Bake 20 to 25 minutes at 350 degree F (or until top springs back when lightly pressed with fingers). Cool. For glaze: combine icing sugar and applesauce. Brush on cupcakes. Makes 1½ dozen.

Bran Muffins in Bunches

By MARY MOORE

We have a handy muffin recipe for you to add to your "Efficient and Good" file.

It is a muffin batter that makes four or five dozen according to the size of your muffin pans and can be made up in two ways: 1) Make and bake the whole batch, eat some for current meal, freezerwrap and freeze remainder; 2) make batter, bake a panful of muffins, store remainder of unbaked batter in tightly covered container and as needed scoop out enough batter to fill one pan and bake it. Re-cover container tightly ready for next time it is needed. It will last one week, refrigerated.

LARGE QUANTITY REFRIGERATOR BRAN MUFFINS

2 c. all bran.
2 c. boiling water.
3 tbsp. baking soda.
1 c. margarine (room temperature).
3½ c. granulated sugar.
4 eggs.
2c. raisins.
1 qt. buttermilk.
5 c. stirred but unsifted cake-and-pastry flour.
2 tsp. salt.
4 c. bran flakes.

In bowl mix together all bran, boiling water and baking soda. Set aside.

In very large mixing bowl or preserving kettle cream together the margarine and white sugar. Blend in eggs. Add all bran mixture, raisins and buttermilk and stir to combine. Beat in flour and salt until no lumps are left. Fold in bran flakes. Batter is rather thin compared to the rather thick batter you are accustomed to for muffins but thickens as it sits in refrigerator. Allow to rest in refrigerator a few hours before using. Spoon into paper cup-cake-lined muffin tins to 7-8 fill. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes for large — 18 minutes for medium.

Black Forest Cake German Tradition

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

The traditional Black Forest cake, with its kirsch-scented chocolate layers and its tantalizing blend of sour and sweet cherries, is one of Germany's proudest contributions to the world's cookery. The version here is that of Albert Kumin, a leading pastry chef at the Culinary Insitute of America, in Hyde Park, N.Y.

BLACK FOREST CAKE

1 10-inch chocolate spongecake (see recipe)
½ cup plus 1 tablespoon sugar
1 cup water
2 thin orange or lemon wedges
1 small can dark sweet pitted cherries (see note)
1 one-pound can sour cherries (see note)
⅓ cup kirschwasser
1 three-ounce (85-gram) bar of imported bittersweet chocolate
3 cups heavy cream
3 drops pure vanilla extract
Scraped and/or grated chocolate for garnish.

1 Prepare the spongecake and set aside.

2. Combine half a cup of sugar and the water in a saucepan. Add the orange or lemon wedges and bring to the boil. Simmer about three minutes and let the syrup cool. Discard wedges.

3. Drain both cans of cherries separately and set cherries aside.

4. Combine the kirschwasser with two-thirds cup of the syrup. Set aside.

5. Place the chocolate in a saucepan and let it melt gradually in a warm place. When it is melted, gradually add three tablespoons of the remaining syrup, stirring.

6. Whip the cream and beat in the remaining tablespoon of sugar and the vanilla.

7. Fold one and one-half cups of the whipped cream into the chocolate mixture. Set the remaining whipped cream aside.

8. Place the cake on a flat surface and, holding a knife parallel to the bottom of the cake, slice the cake into thirds.

9. Place the bottom slice on a serving plate and brush with some of the syrup mixture. Add about half the chocolate mixture to the slice and smooth it over.

10. Cover with the top slice but place it bottom side up. Brush the slice with syrup and add the remaining chocolate mixture, smoothing it over. Using a pastry tube, pipe three rings of whipped cream around the cake. Pipe one ring in the centre, another in the middle and the other around the trim. Arrange sour cherries in the centre and between the middle and outer rings.

11. Top with the final slice of cake. Brush it with the remaining syrup. Add whipped cream to the top, but save enough cream to make 13 rosettes on top of the cake. Smooth the whipped cream around the top and sides of the cake. Use a No. 4 star pastry tube and pipe 12 rosettes, equally spaced, around the upper rim of the cake. Make one rosette in dead centre. Garnish each rosette with one dark swee pitted cherry. Garnish the top with scraped or grated chocolate. Hold in the refrigerator.

Yield: Twelve servings.

CHOCOLATE SPONGECAKE

6 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ cup plus 3 tablespoons flour
4 tablespoons cornstarch
6 tablespoons cocoa powder
3 tablespoons melted butter.

1. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

2. Butter a round cake tin (ours measured 10 by 12 inches). Sprinkle the inside with flour and shake the flour around until the bottom and sides are well coated. Shake out any excess flour.

3. Put the eggs into the bowl of an electric mixer. Bring about two quarts of water to the boil in a casserole or other utensil large enough to hold the mixing bowl. Set the bowl in the water and beat vigorously while adding the sugar. Beat constantly about five minutes until the eggs are lukewarm.

4. Return the bowl to the electric mixer and continue beating on high speed until the mixture is thick, mousse-like and at room temperature. To test, run a spatula through the mass. If it is ready, the spatula will leave a track.

5. Meanwhile, combine the flour, cornstarch and cocoa. Sift together two or three times. Fold the mixture into the batter, using a wooden spoon or spatula. Fold in the butter and pour the mixture into the prepared pan. Bake about 25 to 30 minutes or until the cake pulls away from the pan. Turn the cake out onto a rack to cool.

Yield: One spongecake.

Did you know that in 1864 Canada's first cheese factory was opened in Norwich, Ont.? Three years later, Ontario could boast 200 cheese factories.

You will also learn from the 4-page folder "Canadian Cheese Festival" ("Festival du fromage Canadien") that an estimated 700-2,000 varieties of cheese exist of which number France claims 500. In Canada some 40 different types of natural cheese are manufactured and the average Canadian consumes 13 pounds of cheese per year.

After pointing out why some cheeses are hard and others, soft or semi-soft, the folder explains that process cheese is prepared by mixing one or several cheeses to produce a cheese with uniform flavour and a texture which melts easily.

Cheese is an excellent protein food and may be used in place of meat or fish. The protein in 1 oz. of cheddar cheese equals that of a 7-oz. glass of milk.

A FIXTURE on the Top Ten of the Country charts, Waylon Jennings comes to the Royal Theatre Thursday with The Wailers and special guest stars Pat Roberts and The Drifters in a country spectacular. Jennings has appeared on almost every important music show in the nation and also starred in the film, Nashville Rebel. With a career that seems never to stop growing, both as country and pop star, he has been playing to capacity crowds at almost all his personal appearances at concert halls and clubs. The show starts at 8:30 p.m.

Guilty Plea On Weapon

A 19-year-old Victoria man was placed on probation Monday and ordered to keep the peace for two years after pleading guilty to possession of a dangerous weapon—a knife with a six-inch blade.

County court Judge E. J. C. Stewart told Craig Robert Sillars, 961 Scotia, he was imposing probation rather than a fine because he is young, has no previous record and is unemployed.

Court was told that Sillars said he needed the knife for protection against bigger youths. He had been stopped by police while walking on Douglas Street Oct. 24.

'Can't Get Enough' Wild Rice

TORONTO (CP) — Only about 10 per cent of a vast, rich wild rice crop in northwestern Ontario is being harvested, a fact that bothers Kenora businessman Ben Ratuski.

Ratuski, 39 is the owner-president of Shoal Lake Wild Rice Ltd. that last year sold 100,000 pounds of the gourmet rice at $3.25 a pound wholesale.

"We buy all we can get," he said in an interview. "But we can't get enough, although it's a wild crop and there for the taking.

Ratuski estimates that the potential crop is 10 million pounds a year, spread across 25,000 acres of shallow bays in the Kenor and Lake of The Woods areas. Of this amount, only 1.2 million pounds was harvested in 1973—last year was a bad crop year—by Ojibwa Indians who have exclusive harvesting rights in the bays under provincial regulation.

His Shoal Lake firm received 500,000 pounds of the harvested crop, with the remainder sold by the Indians to buyers in Manitoba and Minnesota.

Ratuski said because of the richness of the resource, pressure is being applied on the provincial government to fully develop it.

He said the province is considering licensing all residents of the area, not just Indians, to pick the crop.

Under the plan, the Indians —about 2,500 live in the area —would be given first choice of jobs in bad crop years.

In a good year, about 800 Indians work in the bays to harvest the rice during the one-month, fall picking season.

"The Indians are only taking about 10 per cent of the potential crop," Ratuski said. As long as only Indians are permitted to harvest the rice, crop yields would not change appreciably.

The crop is harvested from a canoe. On good days, two pickers can net $300 to $400 a day. Wild rice retails for $4 to $7 a pound, depending on where it is bought in Canada, except in Kenora where it sells for $3.75.

"I was born into the wild rice business."

His father, who died eight years ago, was a grocer who was introduced to the industry when he bought a warehouse full of rice from speculators for four cents a pound.

Unable to find a buyer, he was forced to keep the rice in storage for one year when he finally found a Minnesota speculator who gave him six cents a pound for the entire lot.

"My dad thought he had really made a killing," Ratuski recalled. "But three weeks later, another Minnesota buyer offered him 10 cents, and his face dropped. From then on, he was hooked."

"At that time, the Indians harvested the rice mainly for their own use as a food staple," he said. "They would roast it on an open fire and then dance on it to take off the husks."

Although the firm sells in Canada and exports to Germany, Britain and France, Ratuski said the job of developing markets has only begun.

"The potential market is world-wide and unlimited." His firm has only recently developed a canned product of ready-to-serve wild rice which "is going to be our big product because it is so convenient."

"Wild rice has a distinctive nutty flavor," he said. "But the difference is actually in the food value. Wild rice is high in protein while white rice is not."

A recent trend in Manitoba and Minnesota, where the bays are not as numerous or of similar quality as in the Kenora district, has been towards cultivating the grain.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Orange Groves Eye Converting Crops to Sugar

By DR. JEAN MAYER

As we all know, when you are second you're supposed to try harder. The newest case in point is a Florida orange growers' association. It appears that growers are getting a "low return" on sales of frozen concentrated orange juice, and a spokesman for United Growers, Inc., Mr. Wilson McGee, has a unique remedy: sugar. "Sugar is growing on trees" says McGee. "And Florida orange growers could boost their profits by $435 million a year simply by converting their crop to sugar."

Sugar already plays all too large a role in orange drinks and orangeade, which are primarily sugar and water laced with small amounts of juice concentrate or "extracts." But McGee is thinking along much grander lines. Inspired by the current profit margin of the sugar industry, he asks, why not convert Florida's orange crop into sugar.

The idea does make good business sense. When the first experiments were undertaken to concentrating tle out of hand. The process involved extracting the water, but the experimenters carried it a bit too far, and ended up with sugar.

As McGee points out, it would be a relatively simple matter to "decontrol" the process now. The principle is the same as used in taking the juice from sugar cane and refining it into a solid. There would be no need for any new machinery, no need for new or different plants, no need for capital investment. In addition, the cost of the canning process and cans themselves would be eliminated.

The current value of Florida's 1973-74 orange crop is about $265 million. McGee figures that this simple processing change would raise that figure to $700 million — a sizeable profit by any count so long as the price of sugar holds. And this estimate does not include converting the California orange crop!

Surely, you ask, there must be a dark cloud somewhere in this otherwise rosy picture? There is. And as is too often the case these days, the loss would be all the consumer's. For unlike sugar cane, which has little to recommend it nutritionally even before it is converted into the empty calories of table sugar, oranges and their juice are excellent foods.

Fillet Gumbo

(Serves 4-6)

(Make ahead of time and just reheat and add the fish when you need it.)

1 lb. cod fillets,
1-3 cup butter,
2 large onions chopped,
2 chopped green peppers,
2 diced carrots,
2 sticks celery, diced,
2 tsp. salt,
¼ tsp. pepper,
1 bay leaf,
28-oz. can stewed tomatoes,
1 cup cooked rice.

Melt butter, add vegetables and cook until tender crisp. Stir in tomatoes and seasoning. Cook over low heat 15 minutes. Separate partially thawed fillets, brush with lemon juice and dust with seasoned flour. Cut fish into cubes and add fish and rice. Continue cooking for 10 minutes before serving. Serve with a tossed salad and hot buttered toast.

Twice as Proud With 26 Children?

DEAR ABBY: You were much too easy on "Proud Mother" who was proud of the fact that "God" had given her 13 children. (Why blame God alone? Surely she had a husband.)

Proud Mother resented being criticized for the size of her family, saying she didn't ask anyone else to raise or feed them. If she is so proud of 13, perhaps she would be twice as proud with 26. Even if she quit with 13, consider the possibilities (and you will need a calculator) if each of her children multiplies at the same rate. In two generations she will have been responsible for 182 people!!! This number becomes significant when one considers the amount of food and gasoline they will consume in their lifetimes.

While the good lady has been busy making maximum use of God's gift of procreation, she's ignored God's additional gifts of reason based on accumulated knowledge.

Overpopulation and the exhausting of unrenewable natural resources is everybody's business. — Concerned.

DEAR CONCERNED: You were not the only one who expressed concern over Proud Mother's attitude.

Briefly, since the world's resources are limited, we can't continue to provide for a population that daily produces 185,000 new mouths to feed. Obviously, we must either decrease our birthrate or increase our deathrate. The choice is up to us.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our late 20s and have been married for five years. We are both college-educated and have fine jobs, a good home and a beautiful child. On the surface our marriage seems perfect. And it is, except for one thing. Our sex life.

About two years ago my husband began losing interest in sex. I tried everything I could think of — frank discussions, tears, attempts at "new variations" recommended in the "how to" books. Nothing worked.

Finally, I suggested we seek professional help. My husband flatly refused to see either a doctor or a marriage counsellor.

The total absence of a physical relationship has left me frustrated. My husband claims he "loves" me, and that his coming home right after work, buying the food, etc., rather than drinking and gambling, is proof of his love. He says, "hugs, kisses and sex" do not prove love.

He is a good man, and an excellent father. But I refuse at 27 to forego an active sex life. In the past year I've even had erotic dreams about some of the 18-year-old boys in my classes. Please help me.— Frustrated.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: If your husband flatly refuses to get professional help (which is the only solution to your problem), you have two choices. (1) Accept things as they are, or (2) make other living arrangements. Personally, I think he's being unfair to you, and unless he changes his mind, I see an unhappy ending to this otherwise perfect marriage.

Indian Culture Classes Sought

PORT ALBERNI — Native Indians here want local schools to teach Indian culture, and a group has been formed to see it done.

Parents and students from the Coast District Council of Indian Chiefs met recently to talk about ways of integrating the culture programs into the current school system, and decided to study the matter more fully.

"Parents in particular are concerned that the children will lose sight of their Indian heritage under present conditions," said council education director Robert Joseph.

After "a lot more meetings and a lot of homework" Joseph and the group hope to present a brief to local and provincial governments, he said.

Air Crew Life Savers

A Kimberley man is in satisfactory condition in Vancouver General Hospital today after being saved from death while flying from Cranbrook in an armed forces Buffalo aircraft on Saturday.

He began having respiratory problems and was close to a cardiac arrest, an armed forces spokesman at CFB Esquimalt said.

Brown owes his life to nurse Lieut. Beverley Shoemaker and Master Cpl. Robbie MacBournie, the plane's medical crew, the spokesman said.

"The man became unconscious," he said, "and the medical team put him on the automatic respirator. The nurse also gave him intravenous medication."

The spokesman said Brown was unconscious for 20 minutes.

Help Wanted At the Dump

DUNCAN — City council wants help in paying for upkeep of the Duncan garbage dump which is used by residents of the entire Cowichan Valley region.

Aldermen agreed this week to send a letter to the regional board asking the directors of all areas to put up some money for use of the facility.

The dump needs expensive upgrading to meet pollution control branch standards, and aldermen think the cost should be shared.

Dead Man Not Known

NANAIMO — RCMP are attempting to identify a man killed late Tuesday night when he was hit by a car on Nichol Street near Victoria Crescent.

A police spokesman said no identification was found on the man described as 5'10" tall, 180 lbs., with a brown moustache, four-day-old beard, and believed to be either in his 40s or 50s.

He was wearing green pants, a green shirt, a three-quarter length grey top coat and brown shoes.

CUMBERLAND TO GET BOOKS

CUMBERLAND — This village will rejoin the Vancouver Island regional library system after eight years of being without book service, council has decided.

Based on this year's costs, the village would pay about $2,000 per year for the service which would make 8,000 to 10,000 books available for borrowing.

QUALICUM SCHOOL PLAN

QUALICUM BEACH — Almost $4 million in expansion of local schools was announced this week.

The program will include construction of a $2 million high school and renovations to existing schools. The school district stretches from Deep Bay to Nanoose, and includes both Parksville and Qualicum.

East Side Best Side —But Costly

NEW YORK (NYT) — Item: A four-bedroom apartment on Park Avenue was put on the market reeently and one prospective buyer estimated that it needed $70,000 to $100,000 in renovations to put it in good condition. The windows were loose. The electrical wiring was inadequate. The walls had not been painted in years and there was linoleum on the bedroom floor.

The asking price for the apartment was $150,000.

Item: One woman, who says she looked at 95 apartments on the Upper East Side before she found what she wanted, saw a large three-bedroom apartment. She liked it but thought the price was too high. She said so and the owner dropped the price by $100,000, to $150,000.

Item: A one-bedroom apartment (it includes a living room, a kitchen, one and a half bathrooms and a dining nook) at a good East Side address has been rented for $600 a month.

Item: A relatively new building on Madison Avenue has a three-bedroom apartment for rent on a high floor at $1,900. If you stand in the middle of the kitchen, you can almost touch all four walls. There is no dining room and if the doors are closed and a voice is raised slightly in one room, it can be heard in the next.

The above items are random notes from conversations with realtors, brokers and people who are in the process of looking for co-operative or rental apartments on Manhattan's Upper East Side. These particular items are among the more extreme examples of a housing situation that is considered by many an extreme in itself.

Many an our-of-towner has reflected with some sense of irony that the price of a few rooms on the East Side may well be the equivalent where he comes from of a large house with some land and a garage on the best street in town.

But brokers here see things differently. They say that in the last few years the high-priced market on the Upper East Side—roughly the area that lies east of Fifth Avenue from the high 50s into the low 90s — seems to have stabilized.

The catch, however, is that the buyer must have at least $50,000 and be able to afford a monthly maintenance charge ranging from $500 to $1,650, depending on the size and location of his apartment.

The prices of co-operative apartments on the Upper East Side have been falling, following the trend of co-ops and houses elsewhere. Monthly maintenance charges are rising, propelled by taxes, labor and the skyrocketing cost of fuel. (Maintenance charges cover the cost of running the building and include such items as employee salaries, mortgage payments and taxes. Part of the maintenance is tax deductible.) These high charges have made apartments less salable and this, in turn, has pushed prices down.

The prices are dramatically down from the peak prices of 1969, which one broker referred to as the "euphoric period in co-op prices," when demand far exceeded supply and prices spiraled at a dizzying rate.

Rents on the Upper East Side are also high. Many realtors interviewed said that the vacancy rate was more or less the same as last year.

The Upper East Side is so much more expensive than other areas for a variety of reasons. One reason is simply that it has traditionally been the most exclusive neighborhood in the city and there have been enough people able to pay top dollar who wanted to live there.

In addition, assessments are higher there, so land prices and taxes are higher. And the cost of maintaining the large luxury buildings in style has pushed up rents and maintenance charges.

As other neighborhoods have deteriorated and New York has acquired a reputation a sa place where muggers stalk the streets — a reputation that makes many New Yorkers wince and produce a litany of statistics to indicate that the image is very much exaggerated — the district has increasingly gained the reputation of being the only safe place in the city to live. This, too, has pushed up the demand for apartments there.

Pesticide Control Department Sought

A new department of environmental protection responsible for pesticide control should be established in B.C., according to a government report made public Tuesday.

The second report of the royal commission on pesticides and herbicides "strongly recommends" the new department be set up along with a Pesticide Control Act.

The commission, established in May, 1973, under the chairmanship of Dr. C. J. Mackenzie, is expected to bring down its final report on the control and use of pesticides and herbicides some time this year.

In the interim report it says several government departments use pesticides and herbicides and are involved in the control and distribution of those chemicals.

While a number of those departments are concerned about the environment, said the report, "many also have a definite vested interest in the use of pesticides."

The agriculture department is responsible for pesticide control now but, because it also uses pesticides, an independent department should be set up, said the report.

The new department could also take in the Pollution Control Board and would have laboratory and research divisions.

A pesticides advisory and appeal board, chaired by a private citizen, should also be set up with 10 to 16 members and a full-time executive

A new pesticide act would control the licensing of pesticide users and general commerce in pesticides as well as set out penalties and procedures for use of pesticides.

NORM LEVI LEADS JET SET

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi is apparently the biggest traveller among the B.C. cabinet, racking up a total of $8,574 in travel expenses in the last fiscal year.

Premier Barrett was second in the travel department with $7,644 in expenditures.

Resources Minister Bob Williams was third with $6,639, Transport Minister Bob Strachan fourth with $6,215 and Attorney - General Alex Macdonald fifth with $6,195.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young was the lowest spender with only $514 in expenses.

Frank Calder (NDP-Atlin) who was fired from his post as minister without portfolio in July, 1973, ran up travel expenses of $3,119 during his four months in office.

$5 Assessment Bargains Bared

Taxpayers in the province could make use of the assessment appeal system to cash in on getting property assessed for only $5.

The year-end report of the B.C. Assessment Appeal Board tabled in the legislature Tuesday states the board feels "some commercial and industrial assessments are appealed in order to obtain for $5 a complete appraisal of their property when in many cases it costs hundreds of dollars to obtain (an assessment) from an appraiser."

The report recommends that "consideration should be given to re-examining fees payable by a party appealing the assessment."

The board feels that fees should be based on value, the report says.

Another recommendation advises the provincial government that all directives issued by the board "should be supported by legislation or order-in-council."

The Vancouver Island and Gulf Island board, set up when the original assessment appeal board was swamped with appeals, dealt with 193 appeals, 22 in the Greater Victoria assessment district and 10 in the city of Victoria.

In Sidney, seven were heard, in Saanich 33, in Esquimalt 2, and five were heard in Central Saanich.

On the mainland 453 appeals were heard, making a total of 800, of which 650 were decided upon, 20 disqualified, and two forwarded to the Supreme Court of B.C.

The appeals dealt with by the board, chaired by Peter Jenewein, were those forwarded by courts of revision in municipalities and districts across B.C.

GUNFIRE ATTACKS

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Two pizzerias and five other business establishments came under gunfire attack, and police say it appears to be a renewal of warfare between Italian restaurants.

No one was injured in the latest incidents.

"It is possible that this could have been an order job to damage pizzerias," said one police official. "But other establishments were also hit this time. Maybe the pizza war is branching out."

Last summer and fall, several Stockholm pizzerias were damaged by vandals and arson, in what police said was a fight for power and payoffs among Italian establishments.

BRIDLE BITS

By PHIL MERRICK

In the Langley area there is a half-Arab pony that goes by the prickley name of "Holly" and apparently indulges in her own game of tobogganing.

Walking to the top of a hill in her pasture, Holly goes down in the snow, rolls over and slides all the way to the bottom on her back.

Holly repeats this performance two or three times before looking for other pleasures. They say the sight of the sliding pony with all four feet in the air is really something.

There are many accounts on record of exceptional behavior by horses and ponies. Many can be explained by the instinct of self-preservation but others seem to indicate a high degree of intelligence, which some researchers will disclaim.

Horses that become disobedient are usually subjected to punishment and cases have been recorded where the animal prepares itself for the treatment it seems to know is coming after misbehaving.

A racing Thoroughbred named Sorrell Top developed a routine so that he only raced when he wanted to. His plan always worked. The horse would act quite normally in the paddock and on parade before the race. Even the starting gate was accepted and Sorrell Top would stand waiting for the gate to be sprung open and the race started.

If this was the day the Thoroughbred did not want to race he would jump out of the gate with the rest of the field, stop immediately, turn around and duck back into the starting gate where the Jockey was helpless to punish him.

Sorrell Top's other defence was that the starting gate was across the track and in just over a minute the other horses would be galloping around expecting the track to be clear.

The rear gate of the starting stall would be quickly opened, the horse would walk out and the starting gate hauled away just in time. By now it would be too late to punish the reluctant racer and once again Sorrell Top's scheme had worked.

The fitting of harness to a horse is something that is mentioned only in passing in many books on horsemanship or horsemastership. The fit of each piece of equipment is most important if it is to fulfil its purpose efficiently and be worn by the horse comfortably.

Halters should be adjusted so that free movement of the jaws is possible and the noseband is low enough to allow for control of the animal by resting on the soft part of the nose above the nostrils.

There should be no need to unbuckle a halter to put on or take off a horse or pony. If the halter is to be left on while the animal is at pasture, then by all means raise it a hole or so higher or the first time the animal rolls and rubs its head on the ground the halter will come off and probably be lost. A regular brow band fitted to a halter will keep the nose band in position.

Many foals have been injured, some fatally, by putting a foot through a halter fitted to its mother. Another cause of injury to foals is an improperly-fitted halter that allows it to put his hoof through while scratching. The suggestion is to leave halters off mares with foals and be sure the foal's halter is checked for fit every day; foals grow quickly.

U.S. Triples Airlift to Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI) The United States has tripled its airlift of supplies to Cambodia to try to overcome the effects of a rebel blockade which is strangling the capital of Phnom Penh, government military sources said today.

The pro-Communist Khmer Rouge rebels have cut all highways into the Cambodian capital and the government admitted today that efforts to reopen the Mekong River supply route had failed. They said the supply route is "closed and lost."

One diplomat said the U.S. Embassy was studying American laws, trying to find a loophole under which the airlift could be conducted at no cost to the Phnom Penh regime. The current airlift is paid for out of over-all aid to Cambodia, which currently is $1.24 million a day.

The government said the United States doubled the airlift last week and tripled it this week. U.S. military sources in Bangkok said U.S. aircraft now are carrying more than 450 tons of food and war material to the Cambodian capital each day.

Officers said 13 U.S. Air Force planes and nine DC-8 jets a day are landing at Pochentong airport with supplies. The air force turboprops carry about 15 tons of cargo each, while the jets transport about 30 tons or more.

All planes are flown by American civilians, in an attempt to keep the U.S. military presence in Cambodia at a low level.

Still, the escalating airlift supplies only about a quarter of the basic needs of the Cambodian capital for food, fuel and ammunition, government officers here said.

"The capital area consumes about 900 tons of ammunition, 546 tons of rice and 300 tons of fuel per day, even when all those items are rationed, diplomatic sources said.

Pro-communist rebels control the entire 27-mile section between the South Vietnamese frontier and the river town of Neak Luong, the sources said. In addition the rebels are deeply entrenched along more than 50 per cent of the 44 miles between Neak Luong and Phnom Penh.

Although they have no desire to increase the airlift again, U.S. officials have admitted to newsmen a Berlin-style airlift to Phnom Penh might become necessary.

Vic High To Elect New PM

A new student prime minister will be elected Thursday at Victoria senior secondary school in the first mid-term student election since 1967.

Vic High's student parliament brought down the government last week by defeating the prime minister, Doug Benedict, and his cabinet on a money bill.

Members of the student parliament (MSPs), who represent home rooms in the school, will choose one of three prime ministerial candidates Thursday at noon after consulting their constituents.

Candidates are Benedict, John Faucett and Celia McArthur, all Grade 12 students.

The student parliament has a $6,000 to $9,000 budget each year and oversees a variety of sports and social activities, said teacher Ron Wickstrom, who acts as governor-general.

Last time a student prime minister and his cabinet were defeated in mid-term was in 1967, Wickstrom said.

MAGNUSON

Wash. State Senator Wields Hefty Influence

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Senator Warren Magnuson of Washington State was described by the late President John Kennedy as speaking "so quietly that few can hear him."

"He comes into the Senate late in the afternoon, very hesitant, afraid of interrupting other members of the Senate," Kennedy said in a Seattle speech on Nov. 16, 1961. "When he rises to speak most members of the Senate have left; he sends his message up to the senate and everyone says, what is it? And the senator only says it's nothing important, and the Grand Coulee Dam is built."

Thirteen years after Kennedy's witticism the small Pacific state can claim, in Magnuson and Senator Henry Jackson, two of the most powerful politicians in the country, one of them a possible president, and a sudden surge in influence in the House of Representatives as well.

At the same time, the 22nd largest state of the union, a key neighbor of Canada's in energy and environmental matters, is carving out an enviable reputation for good government and desirability as a place to live—Seattle recently topped a nationwide survey as the "best" all-round city.

So far as Canada is concerned Washington State's power base is an important factor in the general equation of relation with the U.S.

The prime recent example of this is the role of the state in federal negotiations about the impact of oil tankers on the coastal environment.

It was the state's initiative in coming up with alternative routing and docking proposals for the tankers that defused a long-term conflict, seemingly impossible to resolve, at the federal level.

Legislation introduced by Governor Daniel Evans will, if successful, keep much of the Alaska tanker traffic out of the hazardous inland waters where the danger of a catastrophic oil spill would be a constant threat to Canada-U.S. relations.

Gov. Evans' legislation, which involves states' rights over shoreline development and would provide for state control—even state ownership—of an offshore tanker terminal within the territorial limit, was anticipated by new U.S. federal legislation, steered through congress by Senator Magnuson, giving states veto power over the location of such terminals beyond the three-mile limit as well.

Magnuson got this bill through just before the Christmas adjournament and since then has engaged in a flurry of activity dealing with the tanker safety question, including a new bill requiring double bottoms on all new, large U.S. oil tankers.

As chairman of the senate commerce committee, Magnuson wields a hefty influence over a wide range of issues in the capital, including consumer legislation, fisheries and transportation.

He is also second-ranking member on the powerful appropriations committee and on the aeronautics and space committee.

Actually Magnuson has been around Congress longer than all but four men, two in the Senate and two in the House of Representatives, having started his capital career in 1937.

Jackson, although the "junior"—he came here in 1941 as a house member—has carved out an even more impressive power base.

He is chairman of the Senate interior committee, which means he is the major influence on legislation concerning resources and conservation. He is also chairman of very influential foreign policy subcommittees on arms control and the nuclear test-ban treaty.

Jackson also happens to be the current front-runner for the Democratic party's presidential nomination in 1976.

Ironically, Washington State might also produce a Republican candidate for the presidency in Gov. Evans. Although Evans has not publicly responded to this he was named on former president Richard Nixon's list of possible vice-presidential candidates to take over from Spiro Agnew and his name circulated again briefly when President Ford was seeking a vice-president.

As it happens, Ford's desire to run in 1976 may cut off any boom for Evans, yet he is still mentioned wistfully as a potential asset to the federal cabinet, perhaps in a Ford second-term administration, and is young enough to be considered for the top spot in 1980.

In the turmoil of reorganization and reform sweeping the House of Representatives in the newly-elected Congress, Washington State is also consolidating an unusual power base.

Representative Thomas Foley, from the eastern state district bordering on B.C., has become chairman of the house agricultural committee.

Representative Brock Adams, from Seattle, is regarded as the front-runner for chairmanship of the influential new house budget committee, which will oversee the total spending program for the U.S. government for the first time this year, a job to be assigned Feb. 5.

Both these men are regarded as potential senators, who could seek higher office either in 1976 to replace Sen. Jackson if he is the presidential candidate, or in 1980 to replace Sen. Magnuson, who is considered likely to retire at the age of 75.

Moving up through the house ranks toward powerful positions are representatives Lloyd Meeds, chairman of subcommittees on education and Indian affairs, and Mike McCormack, on the pork-barrel public works committee and chairman of an energy subcommittee.

Already Washington State gets the 14th largest share of federal spending, even though it is the 22nd largest state in terms of population.

As the Pacific presence grows here, so does the impact of its representatives on foreign policy, including policy towards Canada.

Meeds made an especially hard-hitting speech on Canada-U.S. relations at Bellingham late last year. Jackson and Magnuson have taken to firing off letters and telegrams to the president and the state department urging more an effective — and sometimes tougher — line toward Canada.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, East perpetrated a swindle that was really a thing of beauty. The deal arose in a team-of-four championship event. Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♥ J 10 8 3
♦ K Q
♣ 8 4

WEST
♠ Q 8 5
♥ 6
♦ 10 6 4 3

EAST
♠ 10 7
♥ K 5
♦ A 8 7 5 2

SOUTH
♠ 6 4 3
♥ A Q 9 7 4 2
♦ J 9
♣ K 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♦.

West's opening diamond lead was taken by East's ace, after which East pushed his chair back and paused for reflection. About 20 seconds later, East played the ten of spades, dummy's jack winning the trick.

If you were the declarer, and saw only the North-South cards, wouldn't you be just about certain that East had started with the singleton ten of spades? And that if the finesse in trumps lost (to a singleton king yet!), a spade would be returned for East to ruff? Declarer was certainly afraid of that possibility.

So instead of taking the trump finesse at trick three, he led dummy's three of trumps to his ace — after all, there was a fair chance of catching West with the singleton king of trumps. As can be observed, both opponents followed suit with low trumps.

A spade was led next, dummy's nine of spades being finessed successfully. Declarer's hope, of course, was to discard his five of clubs on the fourth spade laid. But when he led the third round, East ruffed with his king. He then led the queen of clubs, and two tricks later declarer had incurred a one-trick set.

From East's point of view, when he took the diamond ace at trick one, he indulged in the wishful thinking that his partner possessed the ace of clubs. But even if this were the case, it would not in itself be sufficient to defeat the contract, since it was obvius that the defenders couldn't make any tricks in either spades or diamonds.

The hope, therefore, was that declarer could be talked out of taking the trump finesse, for fear that if it lost, dire consequences might result. And so out came the ten of spades at trick two — and declarer fell for it, hook, line and sinker.

DORAN DIES

DETROIT (AP) — John (Red) Doran, who played with two National Hockey League teams, has died at the age of 63.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"You and Bill, taken last week, eh?" said John, looking at the photo on the desk. "Very nice too. How old is the boy now?"

Mike did some quick figuring on the back of an envelope. "A teaser for you," he replied. "If you divide your age by mine and subtract the result from your age divided by his, you get just one seventh of your age."

How old was Mike?

(Answer tomorrow.)

Yesterday's answer: ELSIE was 13751.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thurs., Feb. 20

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you insist that the "old way" is the best, you could be throwing good money after "the old." Means revise ideas, plans. Relative is sincere but misses major point. Do your own checking. Get ready for cold plunge into future.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take added steps to preserve and protect assets. Someone wants something for nothing — and you could be a prime target. Know it and respond accordingly. Some of your hopes, wishes will have to be revised. It is necessary to streamline procedures.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Partner or mate may be asking for something that doesn't exist. Open dialogue. Share knowledge and emotions. Aquarian could figure prominently. Your intuitive intellect is on target. Legal loophole should be closed. Scrutinize documents.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Shake off lethargy. Socialize. Accept invitations. Get correspondence going — be in touch" with friend at a distance. Come out of shadows. Start laughing again — especially at your own foibles. More people are on your side than might be imagined.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emotions dominate — you tend to be aggressive now and extravagant. You'll be dealing with Leo, Aquarius and Scorpio persons. You could be involved in flirtation. Don't give up something of value for temporary "thrill."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be prepared for change, travel, variety, a more meaningful relationship. Refuse to be intimidated by one who spreads gossip. Stand tall and those in authority will stand by you. Know it and act like you are aware of it. Message will be clarified!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): One close to you needs reassurance. This may be due to proposed journey. Domestic situation requires attention. Give it in loving way. What appears to be a disagreement is merely a temporary emotional storm.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You see fine line and read fine print. You become more knowledgeable. You begin to specialize and gain resect for it. Pisces, Virgo could be involved. Costs are in picture. You learn what you must give up to obtain what is desired.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are seeing through prism. Means the images may not be sharp, clear. Accent is on making reality out of dreams. Partnerships, special relationships are emphasized. Older person who cares for you may also insist on discipline.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Finish rather than begin — get rid of losing proposition. Means exert pressure to change lifestyle. Aries, Libra could figure prominently. Health, sleep, diet — these areas are spotlighted because of some concern. You are going to receive letter of appreciation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could fall madly in — or out of love. Nothing seems now to occur in moderation. What happens is intense—all or nothing. Specifically, a dream world seems to become solid. You get a chance to prove intentions — to others and to yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Whether or not you like it, practicality will be a necessity. Means puzzle pieces fall into place. What is "extra" will be discarded. You know instinctively what should be done. Key is to do it. If you procrastinate, you pay a dear price.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, moody, sexy. You will experience one of your most significant years, with September an outstanding month. In single, you marry. If married, there could be an addition to family. Married or single, you assume added responsibility and could go into business for yourself.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BAKER—In loving memory of my dear husband, Christopher Ward Baker, who passed away February 19, 1972.
I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own,
And day by day I miss him more,
As I walk through life alone.
—Always remembered by his wife, Lillian and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

What to Do With Yule Plants

The Christmas gift plants in pots remain in thriving condition in some homes until late March or even into April, yet in others the same kind of plants wilt or otherwise begin to look dreary after only two or three weeks.

Dry warm air is the worst enemy of cyclamens, poinsettias, azaleas and chrysanthemums. The next enemy is a constantly wet soil, and finally a bone dry soil with an occasional drop of water.

Up to a certain point, these four pot plants like a similar moderately warm air, cooler at night, some moisture around the foliage, an occasional thorough watering of the soil in the pot followed by several days of gradual drying until the next thorough soaking.

Many potted cyclamens flower from early December into April if they are kept at a constant moderate temperature with a strong northern light. When no more flower buds are seen and leaves begin to discolor, reduce watering gradually.

Reducing watering is not the same as discontinuing watering. Reducing is done gradually, by giving half the previous amount at longer intervals. Ultimately you come to giving nothing.

When the leaves of the cyclamen finally turn yellow, or brown and shrivelled, cease watering and store the pot containing the corm in a cool place away from summer sun and heat.

The ideal place for cyclamen pots is lying on their sides beneath greenhouse benches, where the pots get some water drip but the corms do not. Perhaps laying a single pot on its side under a dripping tap twice during summer would duplicate this condition., The dormant corm must not be wet nor must it become completely dried.

Poinsettias should keep foliage green until late April or so, although you must begin to give less water during March for the plant to approach a short spring resting period. This is not dormancy.

By the first of May, cut back the plant to about six inches, choosing to keep about three good growth buds you may find on the old stem below that height.

At the end of May, water the plant thoroughly, put into a sunny window and watch the new shoots grow. Then if you want to keep the old plant, repot into fresh humusy soil when the shoots are a quarter inch long.

Otherwise, leave in the same pot, grow the shoots as cuttings, taking them off when three inches long to root in damp sandy soil.

When rooted, plant the cuttings three in a five-inch pot of sandy soil and grow into a new plant, outdoors from June to September, making strong healthy young growth in summer sunshine. Water throughout the summer as necessary. Discard the old plant after the cuttings are rooted well.

Potted azaleas are easy to keep if you remember to syringe the foliage every day after the flowers are over. New growth will not come in dry air.

To keep as a pot plant, repot about early April when flowers are finished. Use sandy, peat soil thoroughly dampened in a pail before potting.

No cutting back is needed, for new growth comes from the base of the present flower stems. During summer soak the pot about every four weeks in tepid water in addition to the normal waterings each week and spray the foliage each day with tepid water.

Chrysanthemums are cut back to an inch above soil level, before planting the complete rootball from the pot into the garden. Stems will grow all summer, making flower buds by fall to open probably in September. Flowers will be smaller and probably a slightly different shade from what you remember on the plant when received.

Island Pacific Realty
TUDOR COTTAGE
Ideal 1650 sq. ft. authentic English cottage with 3 bedrooms. Situated on half-acre of level land. This has fantastic possibilities. It makes an ideal country home with attached garage and beautiful stonework arch and patio, large greenhouse and the inside is absolutely fabulous. There is the possibility of subdividing a lot off the property and this would sell for around $22,000. Third possibility is for commercial. The municipality has intimated that they would entertain an application for rezoning to commercial but for limited use, as a tea room, hairdresser or similar situations. Priced at only $79,900 and really worth taking a look at.

JAMES BAY FAMILY HOME

After 30 years in one place you hate to leave. That's the way the owners of this fine old home feel. It was a wonderful place to raise their family of 5 children. Right beside McDonald Park and the tennis courts, close to the beaches of Dallas Road, right on the bus line. Their warm cozy living room and spacious dining room were a constant centre for family life. Their modern kitchen with built-ins, their full basement with office, workshop, and laundry area, and their large, private lot make it awfully difficult to leave. They hope that once you've bought, you'll feel the same way. Asking $47,900.

Retired Newsman Dies

VANCOUVER (CP — William (Bill) Lewis, 68, a news desk man with the Vancouver Sun until his retirement in 1971 and one-time sports editor and news editor of the Edmonton Bulletin, died Tuesday of throat cancer in hospital after several months' illness.

Born in Emoonton, Lewis started his newspaper career there in 1926 and covered sports before taking over later as the Bulletin's sports editor.

Besides his wife Evalin, he leaves his 95-year-old mother in Edmonton, two brothers — Wendell, Edmonton, and Seth, Aldergrove, B.C. — two sisters — Alma, Edmonton, and Mrs. Charles Stewart, Winterburn, Alta.

RED CROSS BLOOD CLINIC

Today's clinic, at Spectrum community school, 3418 Carey, will be open this evening from 6:30 to 9 and the public is welcome.

The clinic Thursday is at Camosun College on Lansdowne Road and the hours are 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 3:30 p.m.

Board Study On Literacy

Saanich school board voted Monday to ask its administration to study the literacy problem in district schools.

Board chairman Norma Sealey said not just proficiency in the English language but also in arithmetic will be surveyed.

NDP Elects Party Whip

The NDP caucus has elected North Vancouver-Seymour MLA Colin Gabelmann its new party whip.

U.S., ROMANIA SET TRADE TIE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. and Romania are completing a trade agreement linked to freer emigration, the safe condition that the Soviet Union rejected last month, officials acknowledged Tuesday.

Negotiations with Romania on the new trade terms set by Congress began Jan. 15 in Bucharest. A U.S. delegation has returned from Romania, and discussions are now "in the final stages," U.S. officials said.

A state department spokesman, when asked Tuesday if Romania is accepting the American requirement that it assure freedom of emigration, said the U.S. is negotiating in accordance with all requirements of the 1974 U.S. trade law. He said "negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily."

The Soviet Union last month indignantly spurned the emigration condition as American interference in its internal affairs. That rejection, which blocks the 1972 U.S.-Soviet trade agreement from coming into force and prevents settlement of the Russian lend-lease debt to the U.S., and was a significant setback to relations between Moscow and Washington.

Although the Ford administration is proceeding with trade negotiations involving Romania, President Ford last week criticized the trade-emigration link as an action by Congress that "led the Soviet Union to repudiate its 1972 economic accord with us."

Romania, by moving in a direction which Moscow declined to take, would be showing a more flexible international line than the Soviet Union, a posture that Romania covets.

Plastic Fumes Injure Packers

WASHINGTON (WP) Fumes from the plastic used to wrap meat in stores and from the adhesive on the packages' labels have caused severe breathing problems among supermarketworkers, a team of University of Oregon Medical scientists reported Monday.

One of the gases causing the respiratory ailments comes from the plastic polyvinyl chloride, which has been found to cause a rare form of liver cancer in plastics workers.

But the Oregon researchers said they detected no signs of liver disease among the meat wrappers and other supermarket employees they studied. They added that consumers are not likely to be subjected to the fumes, which come as a result of heating the plastics to seal the packages.

Dr. Rudy H. Andrasch of the University of Oregon's division of immunology and allergy said the fumes are activated by the hot plates that seal the plastic wrappings and affix the price labels.

In a study of 96 meatwrappers in Portland, sponsored in part by their union, more than two-thirds of the workers reported breathing problems. Fifty-five of them said their respiratory problems were moderate to severe, including deep coughs, narrowed bronchial tubes or chest pains.

The rest suffered from less severe symptoms, including running noses, sneezing, nasal congestion and sore throats. Some even reported abdominal pains, muscle cramps, irritability, headaches and a tingling of fingers due to nerve involvement.

Many of the workers said their symptoms developed within three to four hours of starting work, but others said they came after only 10 to 15 minutes of work. They generally last through the entire shift.

However, Andrasch reported, some of the meat wrappers said they continued to show signs of the illness months and years after stopping work. This indicates, he said, that continual exposure can result in chronic, irreversible lung disease.

There are about 25,000 to 30,000 workers in the country — meat wrappers, butchers and supervisors—who are exposed to the fumes. But Andrasch said other food workers run the risk of exposure since more and more foods are being wrapped in plastic.

To nail down the cause of the breathing problems, the Oregon scientists exposed meat wrappers to fumes from both the plastic wrapping and the labels.

In one case the exposure had to be stopped after one and one-half hours, because the worker developed severe breathing problems. Four hours after the exposure almost half the workers showed evidence of some breathing problems.

Fumes from the heated labels caused immediate, severe breathing problems in nine out of 13 workers, and these breathing problems continued in four workers for six to eight hours.

While Andrasch said fumes from the heated labels caused the most severe breathing distress, the overall problem was blamed on both prolonged exposure to the polyvinyl chloride wrappers and the labels.

Andrasch said there are workmen's compensation cases and lawsuits pending in Oregon courts on this ailment.

Saint John, Quebec Hit Hardest

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers paid higher prices in all 14 major cities surveyed by Statistics Canada during January, with residents of Quebec City and Saint John, N.B., hardest hit.

The cost of living in each of those cities rose eight-tenths of one per cent on a range of goods including food, clothing, housing, transportation and other items, the government agency reported Tuesday.

Food prices moderated in St. John's, Nfld., Halifax, Winnipeg and Regina, while the food index was unchanged in Calgary. The food index was higher in the other nine regional cities.

St. John's: All items' three-tenths of one per cent; food down six-tenths of one per cent; clothing two-tenths of one per cent.

Halifax: All items, six-tenths of one per cent; food three-tenths of one per cent; housing 1.5 per cent; clothing down one per cent.

Saint John: All items, eight-tenths of one per cent; food four-tenths of one per cent; housing six-tenths of one per cent; clothing down one per cent.

Quebec City: All items, eight-tenths of one per cent; food one per cent; housing 1.1 per cent.

Montreal: All items, six-tenths of one per cent; food 1.3 per cent; housing six-tenths of one per cent; clothing down six-tenths of one per cent.

Ottawa: All items, four-tenths of one per cent; food four-tenths of one per cent; housing one-half of one per cent; clothing down 1.1 per cent.

Toronto: All items, six-tenths of one per cent; food four-tenths of one per cent; housing eight-tenths of one per cent; clothing down three-tenths of one per cent.

Winnipeg: All items, one-tenths of one per cent; food down three-tenths of one per cent; housing and clothing were unchanged.

Regina: All items, three-tenths of one per cent; food down six-tenths of one per cent; housing seven-tenths of one per cent.

Edmonton: All items, six-tenths of one per cent; food six-tenths of one per cent; housing eight-tenths of one per cent.

Calgary: All items, four-tenths of one per cent; housing seven-tenths of one per cent; clothing three-tenths of one per cent.

Vancouver: All items, four-tenths of one per cent; food two-tenths of one per cent; housing three-tenths of one per cent.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A committee of Queen Charlotte Island residents has asked Attorney-General Alex Macdonald why two charges against MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. for damaging a salmon creek have been withdrawn.

In a letter the island protection committee asks Macdonald to reinstate the charges if no explanation for the withdrawal is given.

Federal and provincial government officials have also expressed concern about the withdrawal and about a $300 fine levied last week against Fix Log, Ltd. of Surrey, a MacMillan Bloedel sub-contractor. They claim the fine is too small.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former British Columbia Penitentiary prisoner Michael Wayne Platko, 27, was undergoing psychiatric assessment Tuesday at the regional psychiatric centre in Matsqui near here after holding a recreational officer at knifepoint for four hours late Monday and early Tuesday.

Platko arrived at the centre at about 2:15 a.m. Tuesday and was immediately interviewed by a psychiatrist, said Dr. Chuni Roy, director of the centre.

PORT COQUITLAM (CP) — Aldermen have voted a 20-per-cent pay increase for themselves and have increased the mayor's salary by 35 per cent. Pay for an alderman will increase to $4,800 from $4,000, while the mayor's salary will increase to $11,500 from $8,500. Mayor Jack Campbell said he will not accept the increase and said his salary will remain at $7,500. He said he did not accept the last increase, to $8,500 from $7,500.

POWELL RIVER (CP) — Richard Aliman of Powell River will receive a Workers' Compensation Board bravery award and $500 for rescuing a co-worker from drowning Oct. 20. They were on a crew loading newsprint onto a deep sea ship at the MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. pulp mill dock here when George Woods struck a fender log and plunged 20 feet from the ship's deck into the water.

ASHCROFT (CP) — A dispute which shut down the Bethlehem copper mine near this interior British Columbia community Tuesday has been resolved and men are expected back at work today.

Don Hughes, business agent of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, said the settlement was following a meeting Tuesday night with mine manager Tom Lisk.

The wildcat strike hit the Bethlehem mine following a company decision to lay off about half its 330 employees for three to four weeks following the collapse of an ore bin that damaged a conveyor system. The union said the men were upset because the layoffs were not being made according to seniority.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two persons pleaded guilty Tuesday in British Columbia Supreme Court to trafficking in two pounds of opium.

Joseph Jack Lorne Mah, alias Hobo, 22, pleaded guilty to trafficking in one ounce of heroin in addition to two counts of opium trafficking, both involving a pound of the drug. Another charge of trafficking in opium was stayed by the crown.

Ken Wai Keung Yeunge pleaded guilty to the two counts of opium trafficking each involving a pound and a charge of trafficking in an ounce of heroin was stayed by the crown.

WITNESSES FEARED HUMAN SACRIFICE

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Two of nine Sons of Freedom Doukhobors appearing in court on charges of rioting were acquitted Tuesday and released.

"They were present but mere presence is not sufficient to establish guilt in this charge," the judge told the jury.

William Evdokimoff, Anuta Kootnikoff, Lathleen Astoforoff, Mary Astoforoff, Mary Braun, Helen Planiden and Mary Malakoff are still charged with rioting.

Witnesses testified that Stefan Sorokin, leader of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect, may have been selected to be a human sacrifice at the hands of another religious group.

The witness said nine Sons of Freedom Doukhobors arrived at the Sans of Freedom property in two cars just after 4 a.m., carrying containers of gasoline and a rifle.

Guards stopped them at the gate, but several shots were fired from the rifle, a woman guard was felled by a blow from a cane, and a symbolic fire was set in the ditch beside the road before police arrested the nine an hour later, the court was told.

Mary Wishlow, one of about a dozen guards on duty at the time, identified one of the accused, William Evdokimoff, as the man who carried the rifle and shouted: "Open the gate or I'm going to shoot."

"We didn't open the gate," Mrs. Wishlow said.

Then among much shouting she said she heard Mary Malakoff call out: "Let her come out. Let her know what it's like to have her arms and legs broken."

Then Mrs. Wishlow said she heard Mrs. Astoforoff call: "Let Sorokin come out. We are going to burn. A sacrifice is needed."

The particular Russian word for "sacrifice" that Mrs. Astoforoff used indicates a human life, she explained.

"I didn't know whether they wanted to talk to Sorokin, or shoot him or burn him," she added.

Another witness, Peter Markin, said he had been on guard duty since 11 p.m. the previous evening. The congregation of Sorokins's reformed Doukhobor church provided guards when Sorokin was at his other home in Uruguay, but intensified the protection when he took up residence at Krestova, he said.

He declared that Sorokin had brought comparative peace to the Kootenay district of British Columbia, previously the scene of frequent bombings and burnings.

Markin said the guards had been told during the night that a meeting had been held somewhere else, and that visitors might be coming to Sorokin's home.

He was asked: "Did they come to complain about the use of alcohol and tobacco and the eating of meat?"

"I guess so," he replied. The taboo of alcohol, tobacco and meat is common among all Doukhobor sects.

RivTow Ends Search

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for Rivtow Straits Ltd. said Tuesday that his company feels continuation of the search for three missing members of the crew of the Rivtow Rogue is no longer warranted.

Don Gemmell said the company's independent search for the three men was called off Tuesday due to poor weather conditions. An official search for the men, missing after their vessel sank Friday in rough seas off Prince Rupert, was called off Monday. Rivtow Straits had intended to continue the search for at least one more day.

Missing are mate Cliff Moraes, 31, and cook Andre Schmidt, 43, both of Prince Rupert, and deckhand Frank Brereton, 20, of Toronto. The bodies of three other crewmen have already been recovered.

EATON'S

THANKS, NEIGHBOUR

Capital Region residents have been coping remarkably well without garbage disposal service. Self-help is the best help right now, so here are some tips on reducing your household refuse:

1. Bundle and store newspapers.
2. Rinse and store bottles.
3. Cut the tops from tin cans. Rinse well, remove bottoms, then flatten with your foot. They'll store compactly, odor-free.
4. If you have a garden, compost food waste or bury it at least one foot deep.
5. If you don't have a garden, line your garbage can with one or more plastic bags and deposit food waste only. You'll be surprised how long it takes to fill. Seal the bags separately and store in a secure place.
6. You can burn during the emergency. (Be considerate of your neighbors.)
7. DON'T flush food away. Grease build-up will clog your pipes first.

Is there an elderly neighbor you can help?

SPENDING UP 13%

OTTAWA (CP) — Estimates of government spending for the year beginning April 1, including an over-all increase ranging from 11 to 13 per cent, were tabled today by Treasury Board Chairman Jean Chretien.

However, the government has changed its bookkeeping system for payments to provinces and the result is that the spending increase is understated.

Based on figures supplied by finance department officials, the range of projected spending increases is 12½ per cent to 14½ per cent.

The estimates tabled today are the first in a series for the coming fiscal year and cover projected spending of $28,242 billion.

UPTURNED BARGE SPILLS TANK CARS

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A barge carrying four railway tank cars, each holding 85 tons of chlorine ,and tanks containing 256 tons of liquid caustic, upturned in the Strait of Georgia today.

Scientists said there could be danger to marine life from the chemicals.

The Kingcome Navigation Co. of Vancouver barge, FMC 100, was being towed by Pacific Towing Services'' tug Chieftain III from Squamish to Powell River.

The upturned barge was not noticed until 5:45 a.m., when the master of the tug, worried about the slowness of the tug's speed, turned around to find the barge upside down.

It is known that liquid caustic is leaking from the barge but it's still not known how many of the chlorine tanks have been swept to the bottom.

Ministry of transport spokesman Des Allard in Vancouver said it was feared three of the chlorine tanks are on the ocean bed.

Allard said divers were standing by to examine the barge's leaks but were unable to enter the water because of the toxicity caused by the liquid caustic.

A number of vessels were standing by, including the fisheries vessel Brama and the coast guard cutter Rider.

Allard said the barge's upheaval was noticed at Grief Point on the mainland opposite the north tip of Texada and it was not known how long the barge had been that way.

Personnel were endeavouring to carry out an underwater wire sweep of the barge to find out if any of the chlorine containers were still chained below.

He said, however, it was feared at least three had been lost. There was no way of knowing, until they were found, if they were leaking.

"We don't know where these bloody tanks are," he said, "Or whether any of them are leaking."

If it could be done, Allard said, it was planned to tow the barge to Jervis Inlet but officials were concerned about weather conditions. Winds were expected to whip up to 30 knots.

Allard said there was no way of knowing how deep the lost chlorine tanks are.

"They could be in 200 or 1,000 feet of water," Allard said, adding, "But we've received a report from Washington, D.C., that 231 feet is the critical point. Above that level it begins to boil."

Rr. C. S. Wong, chief of the department of environment's ocean chemistry division in Victoria said if the leaks of either chlorine or liquid caustic are large they would take their toll of marine life.

Both chemicals could kill plankton he said.

In addition, chlorine is acidic, Wong said, and would attack the tissues of fish.

"Liquid caustic," Wong added, "raises the alkalinity of the water and could be corrosive, too. It would attack pieces of organisms in marine life."

He aded, "It's a mixed bag of problems."

Hospital Planner Hired

A new director of hospital planning for the Capital district has been hired by the regional hospital board and will start work about the end of March.

He is John A. Clark, 34, a health planning consultant with the federal department of health and welfare in Ottawa.

Born in England, Clark held a number of hospital administration posts there before coming to Canada in 1969. He was administrator at Cornwall General Hospital in Ontario and at Carleton-Queensway Hospital in Ottawa before holding the federal consulting office.

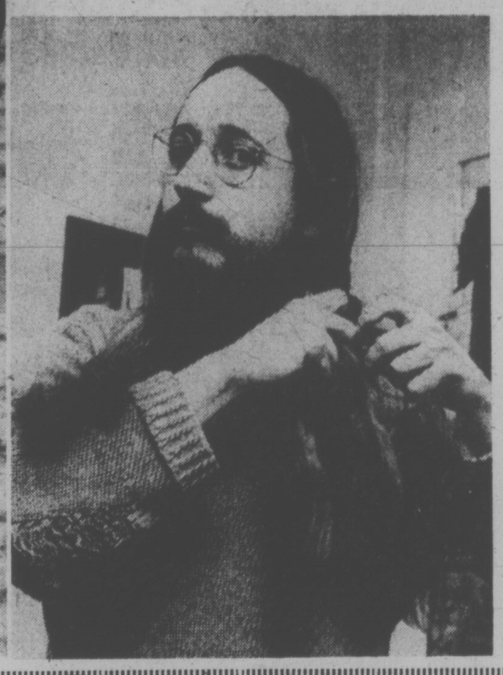
As regional director of hospital planning, at a salary of $28,000, he will be the chief administrative officer of the Capital district's new Hospital and Health Planning Commission, the agency which has been charged with developing and implementing a regional plan for hospital development.

He will also be the liaison man between the planning commission, hospitals thoughout the district and the provincial government's B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

The hospital planning director's position has been vacant since the first man to hold the post, John Forrester, left last August for an Alberta government job.

Improving The Image

Best dressed man in the House at Tuesday's opening of the fifth session of the 30th B.C. Legislative Assembly was natty Vancouver Sun photographer Steve Bosch, replete with bowler, white tie and gloves. Bosch, whose new-found sartorial splendor earned a chuckle from Premier Dave Barrett, says his rented tux was to improve the image of the press. Today the lensman, normally a casual dresser, let his hair down somewhat.



SALARIES JUMP 16%

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wage increases in British Columbia in 1974 averaged 16 per cent or 86 cents an hour, Labor department statistics show.

Skilled employees received average increases of 17 per cent or $1.03 an hour while unskilled workers received 15 per cent or 66 cents an hour.

In 1974, unions had a net gain over the rising cost of living, settlements were 5.4 per cent higher than the previous year while the national rate of inflation was up 3.3 per cent, researchers reported.

In 1973, the average annual increase was 10.6 per cent. It was 9.4 per cent in 1972 and 8.2 per cent in 1971.

Department statistics also show that six of every 10 workers who have joined the province's labor force since 1972 now are union members.

Organized workers now number 395,846 or 43.9 per cent of the total provincial labor force.

Airports, Mail Snarled

Times News Services

A strike by 11,000 federal began to disrupt air traffic across Canada, snarling operations at the country's major airports.

Cross-country postal service also bogged down with a virtual shutdown of the Toronto post office, a key re-handling centre in the postal system. A post office spokesman in Ottawa said closure of the Toronto and Montreal post offices is being considered.

The Toronto post office began laying off 5,000 workers idled by a strike by maintenance men employed by the department and a full shutdown is likely by Thursday.

Michael Lyons, PSAC regional representative in Toronto, said the Toronto post office walkout has been extended to midnight Thursday night from an original cut-off time of midnight Tuesday night.

"This way we stand a better chance of getting it settled as quickly as possible instead of dragging on for weeks with rotating strikes," he said.

Air Canada cancelled all morning flights out of Montreal and short and medium-haul flights out of Toronto International Airport as weather aided striking employees by clogging runways with snow or ic.

Halifax and Saint John, N.B., airports also were closed for at least the morning, but because of thick weather and not the strikes that began Tuesday.

Air Canada reported that its use of all other airports in eastern Canada except Ottawa was discontinued for varying periods of the day either because of weather conditions or because its planes were grounded elsewhere.

NEWS BRIEFS

B.C. Tel Lay-Offs

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — B.C. Telephone Co. will lay off 25 operators because of a 25-per-cent decrease in the number of operator-handled calls. A company spokesman blamed the decreased number of calls on the slumping economy.

Gold Price Soars

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The price of gold shot up almost $5 in Zurich today and the U.S. dollar declined on most international exchanges and equalled its January all-time low in Amsterdam.

Advisers to Kuwait

KUWAIT (UPI) — Kuwait's defence minister said today U.S. military advisers will come to this Persian Gulf state to train Kuwaitis in using the $250 million in sophisticated American weapons bought in 1974.

No Dividends

NEW YORK (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. today omitted paying a dividend to stockholders for the first time since the great depression. "The combination of a very serious economic recession and the sharpest drop in automotive sales since the Second World War has affected our operations adversely," Chrysler chairman Lynn Townsend said in announcing the decision.

Gas 'Threats' Irk Macdonald

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government's willingness to help the United States with its natural gas supply problems will diminish with threats of retaliation from Washington, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

Commenting in the Commons on reports that a U.S. state department official says Canada faces drastic retaliation if it reduces exports of natural gas, the minister said he is willing to assist the U.S. with its problem—but not under duress.

An external affairs spokesman said earlier that the reports concerning possible retaliation were speculative and hypothetical.

The report said the U.S. state department was considering a number of retaliatory steps ranging from the cutting off of Canadian pipelines running through the United States to ending American coal shipments to Ontario steel and electrical generating plants.

In a related development, a federal proposal to cut oil exports to the United States to 650,000 barrels a day will be discussed at a federal-provincial meeting here April 9-10, Macdonald said.

Exports that averaged 900,000 barrels daily last year were cut to 800,000 barrels in January after Ottawa received a report showing a rapid decline in domestic oil reserves.

When he announced the export cuts last November, Macdonald said a further drop to 650,000 barrels would come July 1 if the producing provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan agree.

The National Energy Board has forecast that within two years the country will no longer produce more oil than it consumes.

Macdonald said the additional cut in exports July 1 will come if the provinces agree to reduce production,

VOLCANO BLOWS

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (UPI) — New Zealand's largest active volcano, Mount Ngauruhoe, erupted today, throwing 30-foot boulders thousands of feet into the air and showering ashes onto towns up to 20 miles away.

There were no immediate reports of deaths or injuries but residents of towns near the volcano were prepared to evacuate if ashes contaminated their water supplies.

Government scientists said ash clouds from one eruption reached 47,000 feet and could be seen 100 miles away. Mount Ngauruhoe, 7,515 feet high and about 170 miles south of Auckland, usually experiences minor eruptions or tremors about once a year.

UNIFIED COURTS

A province-wide unified family court system is a major recommendation of the fourth report of the royal commission on family and children's law tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

A gradual phasing-in of the unified court system proposed in the report will follow a pilot project of the system begun last year in Surrey and still continuing.

Among the report's other 66 submissions were the recommendations that the age of majority in B.C. should be lowered from 19 to 18, but that 17 be maintained as the age of adult prosecution. (See story page 10.)

Gov't Purchasing Costs Jump 50%

Inflation hit the provincial purchasing commission last year with a 50 per cent increase in the cost of government purchases.

The annual report of the commission, released Tuesday, shows purchases totalling $127.8 million last year compared to $85 million in 1973. The number of purchase orders, however, increased only 2.8 per cent from 64,811 orders in 1973 to 66,643 in 1974.

"The inflationary trend is predominant," said the report.

"No singular reason or trend for such increases has been demonstrated," said the report, "instead, it appears raw material and basic manufacturing increases have been passed, at will, along industrial and commercial supply channels with little attempt in the intermediate sectors to halt the escalation."

Market shortages, unwillingness of suppliers to maintain and give firm delivery dates and frustrations of obtaining firm prices, made it a "difficult year" for the commission.

A total of 85 employees now work with the commission which buys for government departments but the report said 17 additional staff members have been requested.

The education department's curriculum resources branch increased its purchases from $5.7 million in 1973 to $8.5 million last year.

The legislative library and archives, the Library Development Commission and Queen's Printer combined spent $5.8 million last year, while other government purchases, channelled through the commission, totalled $113.5 million during the year.

VANCOUVTR (CP) — Talks between Greater Vancouver area municipalities and negotiators for 5,000 members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees broke off Tuesday.

The CUPE members in Vancouver, Burnaby, Delta, New Westminster, Richmond and North Vancouver city and district already have voted 85.5 per cent in favor of strike action.

Aubrey Burton, union representative, said municipal negotiators increased their offer to a 15-per-cent wage increase across the board with a cost-of-living adjustment effective July 1 and Oct. 1.

Base rate for CUPE workers in the municipalities is $4.52½ an hour.

LIQUOR PROFITS TOP $108 MILLION

Profits from the sale of liquor in B.C. totalled $108.6 million in the last fiscal year.

The annual report of the Liquor Administration Branch, released Tuesday, reveals total liquor sales during the 1973-74 were valued at $336.8 million.

The liquor itself cost $204.6 million and operating expenses were $25.5 million. Other income to the LAB totalled $2 million, mainly from licencing fees.

Total profits of $108.6 million compared to $97.2 million in 1973, and about $84 million in 1972.

Sales were highest in the spirits division, totalling $174.5 million in 1974 compared with $148.9 million the previous year.

A total of $45.4 million in wines was sold, including $27.5 million in B.C. wines, $16.7 million in imported wines and $1.2 million in other Canadian wines.

Pardons DON'T Erase All Records

OTTAWA (CP) — Senators learned with some surprise Tuesday that pardons granted to erase criminal records do not have much effect.

Officials of the National Parole Board told the Senate legal and constitutional affairs committee that credit agencies and local police forces are not bound to seal convictions despite a pardon.

"Is there any real redress," said Senator Keith Laird (L, Ontario). "I can't see that the pardon does any good at all."

Pardons were established in 1970 under the Criminal Records Act. Persons with a criminal conviction can apply after a period of time varying from two to five years to have their record expunged.

If an investigation shows they have mended their ways, a pardon may be granted by the parole board and their record is sealed.

However, prospective employers and others interested in the person's background can find out about the conviction from credit agencies and local police forces because the act only binds federal agencies, including the RCMP.

Kyle Stevenson, a member of the parole board, said Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has been meeting provincial officials in an attempt to get their co-operation to make pardons more effective.

The committee was continuing hearings on a bill which would transfer control of canabis drugs — marijuana, hasish and liquid hashish — to the Food and Drug Act from the Narcotic Control Act.

'Hell Of a Tornado'

FORT VALLEY, Ga. (UPI) — A "hell of a tornado" streamrolled a central Georgia town Tuesday, crushing homes and businesses and leaving a trial of death and destruction, and floodwaters chased scores of Alabamans from their homes.

One twister left at least one person dead and more than 100 injured in its rampage through the downtown district of Fort Valley, Ga. Authorities said 14 persons were seriously injured.

"We've got numerous houses down and they're still digging in to see if we've got any people there," a Peach County hospital spokesman said.

Police said some 50 homes and downtown businesses were damaged by the twister and some 15 to 20 buildings were "completely gone."

Most of the town was without lights, water or gas early today. Service crews worked round-the-clock to repair damage.

Exhaust Controls Spew Acid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A medical researcher told the U.S. government Tuesday it would be risking a widespread health hazard if it allows exhaust control devices now being placed on cars to spew sulfuric acid into the air.

The environmental protection agency should look "very carefully" at the consequences before permitting any buildup of acid sulfates in the air, as the EPA's own experts now predict would happen with continued use of the catalytic converter in new cars, Dr. Bernard Goldstein of the New York University Medical Center, told a hearing.

The converter, which came into use nationwide with 1975-model cars, is a tailpipe devise which converts health hazardous carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons into relatively harmless substances. But an EPA study indicates that it also gives off sulfuric acid at levels which could cause a health hazard that in a few years would outwiegh any benefits it might have.

Goldstein, a doctor of environmental medicine, told an EPA hearing into the subject there is very little question "that sulfuric acid at almost any level is harmful."

"I would be very frightened about releasing sulfuric acid at ground level" where it could be breathed in by people sitting on park benches or walking down the skyscraper-lined canyons of the major cities, he said.

"I think you would have to recognize this as a great potential health hazard," Goldstein added.

He was reluctant under questioning by EPA experts to state any level of sulfuric acid that he thought would be tolerable.

U.S. DEBT TAKES BIG JUMP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. national debt limit is going to be raised four times higher than had been anticipated two months ago. One senator said the $36 billion increase demonstrated the perilous state of the economy.

The government plans a massive borrowing program this year, one which should in itself seriously affect the economy. One possible effect is higher—or a continued high level—interest rate.

On Tuesday, the Senate voted 70 to 20 for the measure which would increase the nation's temporary debt limit to $531 billion, covering spending through June 30. The bill goes to the White House for President Ford's approval.

Sen. Russell Long, (Dem.-La.), chairman of the finance committee, said the need for such a large increase "reflects the seriousness of the recession." Two months ago, he said, the increase had been estimated at $9 billion.

"There are worse things than an increase in our debt," said Long, hoping increased government spending power will help "put our economy in shape."

Sen. Carl Curtis (Rep.-Neb.) said the bill will neither hold down spending nor limit the national debt—$492 billion as of Feb. 13. The current temporary limit is $495 billion with a permanent ceiling of $400 billion.

Airports Snarled, Mails Fouled Up

Air Canada scrubbed out 38 outbound flights from Toronto but said its services with Western Canada and the Caribbean were continuing, though on a delayed basis, with the single runway available.

This runway, being kept open as an emergency measure, was subject to being closed periodically for maintenance.

In Victoria today all was back to normal as picket lines were withdrawn from HMC Dockyard and the Ministry of Transport marine services base.

Ship repair work at Dockyard was halted Tuesday when the 800 members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council honored the picket line set up Monday by PSAC.

Work was also slowed at the marine services base on Harbor Road when employees designated as "essential to national safety and security" and therefore not allwoed to strike, refused to cross the picket line set up by fellow PSAC members.

A PSAC spokesman said the the government had selected too many employees as essential to security.

The 81 Alliance employees at Comox air base remained off the job today for the third day.

As nation-wide effects to the strike mounted, Treasury Board chairman Jean Chretien called Tuesday for renewed efforts to resolve the dispute.

Officials said they were prepared to meet at any time under mediator Tom O'Connor, but union leaders said they were not prepared to resume bargaining until more money is put on the table.

They are seeking a 42.5 per cent pay increase in a one-year contract.

The chairman of the Public Service Staff Relations Board, Jacob Finkelman, today called both parties in the dispute to meet again with O'Connor this afternoon.

It was to be the first session scheduled since talks broke off Monday.

In a related development a Manitoba MP told the Commons that the transport department should launch an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the landing of an Air Canada flight at Winnnipeg International Airport Monday when it was closed by snow conditions.

The strike of federal blue collar workers led to the Winnipeg airport being closed for over two hours because some workers walked out and those staying on the job were unable to clear runways adequately.

A labor shortage in the public service within the next decade unless the wages of the federal blue collar employees are made comparable to those in other sectors had been predicted in a confidential report prepared by the federal pay research bureau.

the weather

Showers will persist along the west coast for the remainder of today with light snow over the interior occasionally mixed with rain over southern sections. Some clearing will occur over most regions Thursday as a small high pressure area moves in on the west coast. A fresh disturbance approaching the north coast Thursday evening will start to spread more clouds and rain to western B.C. during the late afternoon and evening.

Now it costs 6.2¢ to ship a pound of meat from Edmonton to Halifax.

We know about the cost of eggs and meat and sugar. A cup of coffee. Or a glass of beer.

We know because we have to spend more for practically everything CN buys these days.

And we're not just talking about paper clips. The same freight car we bought in 1971 for $17,000 now costs $24,000. (Over the next four years we'll need thousands more of these cars to meet demand.)

Locomotives that were $340,000 apiece are up to $485,000 now. (And we're going to need a lot more of them, too.)

The cost of materials has gone up 81%, diesel fuel 110%, and wages 70% since the start of 1972.

Yet, the recent increase in our "general" rates — which despite their name apply to less than a quarter of our total freight business — was minor by comparison. Obviously we're not going to get rich. With costs continuing to rise, there will have to be further increases to keep pace.

It is in Canada's best interest to have an efficiently-run and adequately compensated rail transportation system with rates based on normal competitive business practices.

But even with moderately higher freight rates, the railroads are still one of Canada's best bargains. Freight rates represent a very small part of the purchase price of a product. Here are a few examples of current rates:

1 lb. sugar — Saint John to Winnipeg — 2.4¢
1 tin canned goods — Chatham, Ont. to Regina — 2.2¢
1 lb. pkg. cereal — Peterborough to Edmonton — 3.7¢
1 lb. butter — Melville, Sask. to Vancouver — 3.5¢
1 lb. fruit — Kamloops to Winnipeg — 3.6¢

There is an unprecedented demand for CN's freight services — a growth of more than 40% over the next five years is projected. To maintain our existing plant and provide for this future growth, we're going to need additional revenues. These will buy modern equipment, improve the capacity of our main track and yards, and help our customers in many other ways.

We can show them, for instance, how to reduce inventories — so expensive at today's interest rates. Consolidate and systematize deliveries. Control total distribution costs.

Those are the kind of economies that are going to make real sense — and dollars — in the long run. For you, and for every Canadian.

The two sides in Greater Victoria's 3½-weeks-old municipal employees dispute today expressed cautious optimism toward renewal of mediation talks scheduled from 10 a.m. Thursday.

Canadian Union of Public Employees area bargaining group is prepared to respond to moves by the regional employers group, representing five municipal and regional jurisdictions which locked out staffs following the start of a legal strike Jan. 27 by CUPE local 50 city of Victoria outside workers.

CUPE area bargaining chairman Jim Walker, president of Local 50, said the counter-proposal is prepared but will not be presented without a sign of movement from employers because CUPE made the last move before talks broke off last month.

Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional District, refused to divulge any strategy or policy emanating from the employer group's weekly meeting Tuesday.

"My hope is that CUPE will not come to the meeting Thursday with their minds made up as to process" (toward a negotiated settlement), Campbell said.

"It is counter-progressive to announce in advance what our intentions are because we want to put our arguments in a quiet, reasonable way to CUPE. This is not the time to tell CUPE through the press what we intend to do.

"I hope their position will be modified if there is going to be any progress in our talks tomorrow," the chairman said.

He said at the meeting of employers and bargaining representatives Tuesday the area-wide situation and its effects were reviewed and found to be "in reasonably good shape."

Municipalities and residents are living with contingency arrangements and are "coping well with the situation," Campbell said.

At the CUPE local level the atmosphere is relaxed as routine picketing goes on at principal municipal operations and membership looks optimistically toward progress being made Thursday.

Bargaining broke down over the wages issue with management standing firm on an offer of 15.76 per cent and the unions seeking parity with rates paid elsewhere on Vancouver Island for similar work.

'No Way' And He Took Off

Refusal to comply with a threat of violence foiled a robbery Tuesday night.

General manager of Canada Dry in Victoria, R. W. Henderson, said he was about to make a deposit in a bank night deposit slot when a voice from behind said: "Give me the money or I'll knife you."

★

"I turned around and said 'No Way' . . . I guess he wasn't prepared for that because he just took off," Henderson said.

Henderson dropped the bag into the slot at the Bank of Nova Scotia, Hillside and Douglas, at about 6 p.m. and ran across Hillside to phone police.

He described the would-be-robber as six feet tall, weighing about 200 pounds and having a black mustache.

'Horrible' N-Sub Base Protested

Gov't Urged to Fight 'Diabolical Development'

The construction of a nuclear warhead submarine base in Washington State, only 60 miles from Victoria, today brought protests from a Victoria area environment group and from Dewdney NDP MLA Peter Rolston.

The Citizens Association to Save the Environment views the construction of the TRIDENT nuclear warhead submarine base at Bangor, Wash. on the shores of the Hood Canal with "frightening alarm," a CASE spokesman said.

"Each of the 10 submarines at this base will carry 24 nuclear tipped warheads. They will constitute a horrific threat of death and destruction to each and every man, woman and child on southern Vancouver Island and elsewhere," a CASE release states.

The 100 CASE members called on the federal, provincial and municipal governments to "vehemently protest this diabolical development."

Rolston was expected to voice his protest to the base on the floor of the legislature this afternoon.

He said he would discuss the problem in his reply to the speech from the throne because of the people of B.C. should at least protest the location of the base.

In a text of his speech released in advance, Rolston said "as the construction of this horrible . . . base proceeds, we are complicit, possibly through our ignorance, in the arms race."

TRIDENT, he said, significantly changes the U.S.A.'s position to a "first strike strategy" which can only serve to aggressively escalate the arms race.

ROLSTON
. . . appalled

Rolston told the legislature that any radioactive fallout from an attack on the base in the Straits of Juan de Fuca would affect southern B.C.

According the MLA, B.C. has been designated as the area for deflecting off-target missiles from the TRIDENT system so that the population of B.C. would be written off as "collateral damage in an initial nuclear attack."

To compound the problem he said, the base will draw foreign forces even closer into neighboring coastal waters.

Calling true peace more than just the absence of tension, Rolston said the B.C. government should formally protest to the U.S. the construction o the TRIDENT missile base.

He also called on the government to fund an independent study into the possible connection of industry and research in B.C. with the U.S. military base at Bangor.

The base has been planned for a number of years and information on it has been leaking out slowly to the public, says Rolston.

He said federal New Democrat Stuart Leggatt, MP for New Westminster, tried to have emergency debate on the matter in the federal house last December but was unsuccessful.

The CASE release called the development of the base "one of many originating from the depraved, abysmally sick minds within the American military juggernaut and the government must be halted in its tracks."

CASE asked that service clubs and organizations, as well as various government levels, voice their protests to President Gerald Ford, the Washington State Assembly and Maurice Strong of the United Nations.

'Help' for Stubborn Cases

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Greater Victoria Help Society is finding no shortage of the people it wants to help — patients with suspected nutritional troubles which produce emotional and behavioral problems.

The society was established in December in order to receive a $10,000 grant from the provincial department of health. But the people involved are the same laymen volunteers who have operated for about three years as the Victoria branch of the Canadian Schizophrenia Foundation.

Over those years the volunteers gathered a wealth of information on the bio-chemical-nutritional-vitamin approach to tackling a stubborn group of complaints ranging from hyperkmesis (overactivity) to juvenile delinquency, drug and alcohol abuse, depression following childbirth and other emotional and behavioral problems.

The foundation, and its offshoot, The Greater Victoria Help Society, is convinced many such problems stem from chemical imbalances peculiar to the patient and can be helped with controlled diet, including vitamin, mineral and enzyme supplements.

The provincial grant has enabled the society to hire for an interim period two full-time workers, Lorna McCraville and Thora Antrobus. Both women previously worked as volunteers.

Between 700 and 800 people came to the Schizophrenia branch for help over its three years, Mrs. McCarville said Tuesday. Already about 300 have come to the new society.

Most of them had been from doctor to doctor but their troubles persisted.

Mrs. McCarville said not only are the medical causes of these emotional problms difficult to pinpoint but there is considerable research constantly uncovering new information.

The society aims at assisting doctors wherever it can by supplying full case histories, information on new developments and suggesting certain tests, she said.

Doctors generally have been amenable and there is increasing interest from the medical profession in allowing the society to co-operate with them in following up cases, said McCarville.

POLLEN NOT YET READY TO DONATE HIS SALARY

Mayor Peter Pollen has yet to be convinced that he should donate his 1975 mayoral salary to the Canadian Union of Public Employees, to back up an offer he made last week.

Pollen had offered to pay his salary into the union's defence fund, if he could be shown specific, written proposals made to the city during negotiations preceding the strike by CUPE Local 50, representing 280 city outside workers.

On Tuesday, CUPE business agent Tom Smith claimed the union proposal was that outside workers receive wages equal to 10 companies in the Greater Victoria area, and added that the union was "looking forward to receiving the mayor's cheque."

Today, however, Pollen said he could recall nothing to that effect having been received in writing, although he did see union-inserted advertisements prior to the strike in which wage comparisons were drawn between CUPE rates and those of five companies — most of them monopolies such as B.C. Hydro, B.C. Telephone and Safeway.

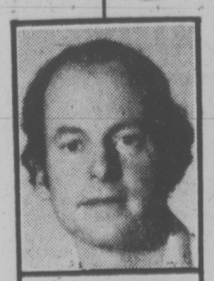
In addition, union officials made public statements about parity with Port Alberni municipal workers, he said, "but I don't consider that specific or written."

Pollen did say that if CUPE can pass on to him an extra copy of its written proposals he would "like to review it."

The mayor was also asked why he had not picketed the Legislative Buildings for the opening of the legislative session Tuesday, as he had declared he would.

He didn't answer the question directly, but laughed and said: "I don't know, we'll just have to leave it for a while." He implied he would wait to see what the provincial budget produced in the way of help for municipalities.

Down the Road, a Special Detour to Freedom



max low

Quite recently a lonely man stood in the dock facing nine counts of breaking and entering. There seemed little doubt. He would end up behind bars.

But he didn't and, for a handful of people battling the odds in an old warehouse on Alpha Street, part of a dream came true.

That man, who otherwise almost certainly would have been sent to jail, sighed a "contract" and was "diverted" to freedom.

His contract moral rather than legal was with the new Community Diversion Centre, which is funded by the B.C. Corrections Branch.

The offender, who was first approached in court and offered help by Bernie Jordens of the Community Diversion Centre, was given three years' probation by the judge. But that was after he had gone with Bernie to the centre, undergone a daily two-hour group assessment process for a couple of weeks and then drawn up his contract.

One of eight full-time and three part-time members of the centre staff, Bernie spends every morning in court deciding which offenders might be suitable for the diversion process. He looks for people whose offences are not so minor that they will just get a fine of automatic probation or for those that are so major (like robbery with violence) that they carry certain jail sentences.

When a person accepts the offer of help, he or she goes to the centre where Bernie tries to determine if that person really has the motivation to do something or is just looking for a way out and trying to stall.

Once accepted, the person is expected to sit in an assessment group with staff members, community sponsors and at least one person who has already been through the process.

"If they don't have a job, then we expect them to do some community work," says Eileen King, who, like centre director Jacqui Aubuchon, is a Sister of St. Ann.

"And we look into how they can make restitution to get them to understand their own responsibility," adds Eileen. "This is so they'll know what they've done and make amends."

A typical contract drawn up at the end of two or three weeks might include promises to be in touch regularly with one of the diversion centre workers, to attend the nearby Warehouse School (which Jacqui Aubuchon has run for the last three years) and to go with a community sponsor each month to repay debts to the person or company offended.

After the offender is put on probation, he goes back to sessions to try to help others just coming into the group. He keeps in touch with his sponsor and attends an evening group therapy session for two or three months.

Lloma O'Gorman . . . aiming for sfability

But, points out Llona O'Gorman, who is in charge of community liaison, it isn't overdone.

"We don't want to create a dependency on the group," she says. "Our ultimate aim is to get a person to stabilize himself in the community."

As well as Jacqui, Eileen, Bernie and Llona, there are counsellors Alan Roe and Linda Krieger, business manager Doug Munn and receptionist-secretary Susan Hebert. And there are Peter McCue, Tom Gale and Bill Maylone, three others who began as voluntary sponsors and are now on staff part-time.

Not all the centre's "clients" are recruited by Bernie. Some are referred by probation officers, lawyers or even the judge.

The formation of the centre on Oct. 1, 1974, came after a three-month study of attitudes in Greater Victoria and, says Eileen, "our dream was to find some alternative, some program or something that would replace prisons."

The women know well what's wrong with prisons. Eileen worked on programs inside Wilkinson Road jail for seven years and Llona, a mother of nine children who has long been involved in community work, helped there, too.

"We worked very hard at getting programs going there but you don't have to be there long to realize programs don't work inside a prison," says Eileen. "Everything you do is torn down by the rest of the system."

They graduated from there ot Project Hope, a program operating inside and outside the prison, and finally to the Community Diversion Centre and the concept of bringing correction into the community.

So far success is difficult to measure. Thirty people have gone through the program to date. Some have written contracts and have been put on probation, several are still involved and others have dropped out.

It's too early to tell, really. But the centre certainly didn't get off to a great start. The first person came into the program on Oct. 26 and his contract was drawn up Nov. 15. Not too long afterward, though, he stole a car and smashed it up.

"They want to get the danger off the streets and they feel that something magical happens up there in a prison," says Llona. "they don't realize when a prisoner comes out he is probably in worse shape than before and the danger hasn't really been taken off the street.

"Most of them aren't vicious people. They're people who can't cope with society . . . and that's what we need to help them do."

9 IN MEMORIAM

BAKER—In loving memory of my dear husband, Christopher Ward Baker, who passed away February 19, 1972.
I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own,
And day by day I miss him more,
As I walk through life alone.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

What to Do With Yule Plants

The Christmas gift plants in pots remain in thriving condition in some homes until late March or even into April, yet in others the same kind of plants wilt or otherwise begin to look dreary after only two or three weeks.

Dry warm air is the worst enemy of cyclamens, poinsettias, azaleas and chrysanthemums. The next enemy is a constantly wet soil, and finally a bone dry soil with an occasional drop of water.

Up to a certain point, these four pot plants like a similar moderately warm air, cooler at night, some moisture around the foliage, an occasional thorough watering of the soil in the pot followed by several days of gradual drying until the next thorough soaking.

Many potted cyclamens flower from early December into April if they are kept at a constant moderate temperature with a strong northern light. When no more flower buds are seen and leaves begin to discolor, reduce watering gradually.

Reducing watering is not the same as discontinuing watering. Reducing is done gradually, by giving half the previous amount at longer intervals. Ultimately you come to giving nothing.

When the leaves of the cyclamen finally turn yellow, or brown and shrivelled, cease watering and store the pot containing the corm in a cool place away from summer sun and heat.

The ideal place for cyclamen pots is lying on their sides beneath greenhouse benches, where the pots get some water drip but the corms do not. Perhaps laying a single pot on its side under a dripping tap twice during summer would duplicate this condition., The dormant corm must not be wet nor must it become completely dried.

Poinsettias should keep foliage green until late April or so, although you must begin to give less water during March for the plant to approach a short spring resting period. This is not dormancy.

By the first of May, cut back the plant to about six inches, choosing to keep about three good growth buds you may find on the old stem below that height.

At the end of May, water the plant thoroughly, put into a sunny window and watch the new shoots grow. Then if you want to keep the old plant, repot into fresh humusy soil when the shoots are a quarter inch long.

Otherwise, leave in the same pot, grow the shoots as cuttings, taking them off when three inches long to root in damp sandy soil.

When rooted, plant the cuttings three in a five-inch pot of sandy soil and grow into a new plant, outdoors from June to September, making strong healthy young growth in summer sunshine. Water throughout the summer as necessary. Discard the old plant after the cuttings are rooted well.

Potted azaleas are easy to keep if you remember to syringe the foliage every day after the flowers are over. New growth will not come in dry air.

To keep as a pot plant, repot about early April when flowers are finished. Use sandy, peat soil thoroughly dampened in a pail before potting.

No cutting back is needed, for new growth comes from the base of the present flower stems. During summer soak the pot about every four weeks in tepid water in addition to the normal waterings each week and spray the foliage each day with tepid water.

Chrysanthemums are cut back to an inch above soil level, before planting the complete rootball from the pot into the garden. Stems will grow all summer, making flower buds by fall to open probably in September. Flowers will be smaller and probably a slightly different shade from what you remember on the plant when received.
